VOTE COST CURB EYED

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday night the government will introduce a bill shortly limiting campaign expenditures and requiring "the state to pay at least part of the bill of election expenses."

The bill was approved by the cabinet Thursday morning, he told a public meeting at an east-end high school on the first day of a two-day visit to southern Ontario.

Asked if the bill will be passed before the next federal election, expected this year, Mr. Trudeau replied "that depends when the election will be."

It was announced later in Ottawa that the bill is expected to be introduced Tuesday.

Ottawa officials said the bill would set up a system of examining expenditures and reporting on them and also require candidates to disclose — in part — the source of funds used to promote their election.

Que. Strikers Close Schools, Hospitals

Montreal demonstrators on way to occupy radio station

QUEBEC (CP) — Industrial and government facilities, schools, hospitals, newspapers and radio stations were hit again today in Quebec, fourth day of a groundswell of labor unrest that began with imprisonment of three top provincial union leaders Tuesday.

Reports of new walkouts and demonstrations poured in hourly from widely separated areas of the province.

The first death linked directly to the turmoil was reported today. A man struck by a car Wednesday during a demonstration has died in Sept-Iles, 30 miles north of Quebec City.

The situation was described as a "crisis" by one of two Quebec cabinet ministers who said they had withdrawn their resignations from Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa's cabinet because of the labor trouble.

The planned resignations had been linked to other matters involving constitutional dealings with the federal government.

Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, said Thursday night he was staying on "principally because of the crisis we are living through."

Jean-Paul L'Allier, civil service minister and the man at the centre of the storm in contract negotiations between the government and 250,000 public service workers, announced in a statement early today he will continue in the cabinet to help find a solution to the current unrest.

Montreal was without any of its six daily newspapers today after walkouts by various employees of the city's four French-language dailies and the two English-language ones.

Elsewhere, L'Action did not publish today at Quebec City and the provincial capital's other French-language daily, Le Soleil, was experiencing a walkout of some employees.

On the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where demonstrators took over Sept-Iles earlier this week until police reinforcements were flown in by Canadian Armed Forces aircraft, there were reports of new walkouts overnight and today by miners, construction workers and teachers at Sept-Iles, Baie Comeau and Hauterive.

Firebombs were thrown at one metals company plant in Baie Comeau overnight and at a garage door on the property of Municipal Affairs Minister Maurice Tessier in Rimouski, across the St. Lawrence River from Baie Comeau.

The 1,000 employees of the Davie Shipbuilding Ltd. yards at Lauzon walked out today and primary and secondary schools in the Levis-Lauzon region and many schools at Sherbrooke, in the eastern townships, were closed by teacher walk-outs.

Other workers who joined the protest today included Montreal postal workers and 8,000 blue collar workers in the same city.

Radio stations have been occupied at various points around the province for brief periods.

In the northwest, CKRN Rouyn-Noranda was reported

B.C. Coal Royalty Loss Hit

By ROBERT OLVER
Times Staff

British Columbians are missing out on at least $1,250,000 yearly on unpaid coal royalties from Kaiser Resources coal mining, according to a fact sheet compiled by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Although that figure is not specifically mentioned in the fact sheet, Barrett claims that Kaiser has a contract to sell Japan five million tons of coal yearly at $18.65 per ton. This means an income to Kaiser of $95 million yearly.

The Coal Act provides for royalty — which Kaiser is exempted from — of 25 cents a ton or $1,250,000 yearly.

Barrett charges that the 25 cents a ton rate is applied on coal mined on what is called crown-leased land. This means, he said, that coal mined on land that was crown-granted — as is the case with Kaiser — no royalties are charged.

'EXPORTING COAL'

Referring to a 1970 Price Waterhouse report on the B.C. mining industry, which shows that Kaiser Resources Ltd. is 75 per cent foreign-owned (Kaiser Steel interests in the United States) Barrett added: "We therefore have an interesting picture of a U.S. company exploiting our coal, paying no royalty, then selling the coal to create employment in secondary industry in Japan. An excellent sample of Social Credit planning."

Barrett has advocated a royalty of $1 a ton on all coal mined in B.C.

Mines Minister Frank Richter replied Thursday: "Mr. Barrett has some points but his figures are a little out."

Richter said the B.C. government had once tried to collect royalties from Kaiser but was overruled by the Supreme Court of Canada on the basis that crown-granted land was exempt from royalties.

"The alternative was to impose a mining tax of 11 cents a ton which is still in excess of what the NDP government in Saskatchewan charges under their legislation."

He also contended that Barrett's proposed $1 a ton royalty would be a crippling charge for Kaiser.

According to Richter: "Kaiser dropped $13 million in 1971 and a further $3 million in the last quarter. The $1 royalty might be fine if they could afford to pay but if it runs them out of the country there is no point to it."

Reds Win Blasted An Loc But Flee Bombed Hanoi

Times News Services

Red troops today bombarded the city of An Loc, 80 miles from Saigon, with a record 10,000 rounds of artillery and rocket fire — almost completely resting control of the devastated city from the South Vietnamese.

A see-saw struggle for An Loc has raged for the past two days.

Meanwhile, withering U.S. bomber attacks on Hanoi have caused North Vietnamese officials to order the evacuation of that city, according to diplomatic sources in Saigon.

David Jackson, head of the Canadian delegation to the International Control Commission, estimates that more than half of the more than one million residents have been removed from the North Vietnamese capital.

And, Radio Hanoi today reported that U.S. bombs have pounded the city's business district, cut a dike that protects one part of the capital from flood waters on the Red River and severly damaged a highway leading to the airport.

Within the past 48 hours, what is left of the wide-boulevarded city of An Loc, has become a symbolic struggle for both sides — although its importance is not as great as the strategic central highlands battles.

One glimmer of hope in the bleak picture came from Paris today with a statement from the U.S. that it is ready to resume the peace talks which were suspended May 4.

The U.S. delegation, however, criticized the Communists for "poisoning the atmosphere" of the sessions.

In other battle sites, the U.S. has imposed a news blackout on the U.S. naval blockade of the key port of Haiphong and six other cities.

NEWS BRIEFS

More Civic Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract talks between striking lower mainland civic workers and the Municipal Labor Relations Bureau were to continue today, spokesmen for both sides said Thursday. Neither side would comment on the progress of the talks or whether agreement on a new contract is near.

Copter Missing

PORT HARDY (CP) — A helicopter owned by a Howard Hughes company and carrying three persons went missing Thursday night on a short flight to this remote community on the northeastern tip of Vancouver Island.

Landslide Vote

DUBLIN — The Irish Republic has voted overwhelmingly to join the Common Market, approving entry by a margin of five to one. The outcome of Wednesday's poll, counted Thursday, came as no surprise but the size of the massive margin was. Prime Minister Jack Lynch told reporters it "demonstrates the political realism of the Irish people."

No Survivors

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter)—Navy officers who today boarded the smouldering hulk of the British freighter Royston Grange said they found no survivors among the ship's 94 passengers and crew. It had collided with a tanker in the River Plate.

U.K. Rail Shut

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's state-run Railways Board today ordered a 32-hour nationwide rail shutdown this weekend. It will leave the country without any trains from Saturday evening until Monday morning.

The board took the drastic action after Britain's 230,000 railroad workers crippled services for the second time in 18 days with a go-slow and ban on overtime work.

The three railroad unions ordered the slowdown to back a pay hike demand which the railways board and the government rejected as "inflationary."

The board announced there will be no trains at all from 10 p.m. Saturday until 6 a.m. Monday.

The new go-slow, which began at midnight Thursday, bit hard into rail services.

Commuter trains into London were hit worst. On the commuter network from London's southern suburbs more than 600 trains were cancelled. Only 232 ran.

Cuts were almost as severe on other commuter networks.

But officials said tens of thousands of workers apparently decided not to battle for places in the few trains still running and simply stayed home.

Rose Trial Jury Hung

MONTREAL (CP) — While spectators cheered and applauded, Jacques Rose was left speechless Thursday when the 12-man jury at his kidnap trial declared it was unable to reach a unanimous verdict after deliberating for 15 hours.

Rose, a 25-year-old former mechanic, was charged with kidnapping Pierre Laporte Oct. 10, 1970. The Quebec labor minister was found strangled a week later.

It was the first hung jury since the trials connected with the October, 1970, kidnap-slaying crisis began in early 1971. A unanimous verdict of guilty was given in all the other trials.

Spectators, mostly friends of Rose and his family, broke out in loud cheers, chanting and joyful tears when the jury foreman told Mr. Justice Eugene Marquis of Court of Queen's Bench there was no chance of reaching a unanimous decision.

"This shows the system is not all bad," the judge said as he put the case over to June 19. Quebec Justice Minister Jeorme Choquette, the attorney-general, must decide whether to institute a new trial or drop the charge.

Clenching his fist in a salute, answered by one of the jurors, Rose was led out of the courtroom less than 15 minutes after entering.

Defence lawyer Robert Lemieux said he will present a request for bail as soon as possible. His client still faces a charge of murder.

Provincial police guards and plainclothes officers in the court made no attempt to control about 50 persons chanting, "Ce n'est qu'un debut, continuons le combat". —It's only a beginning, let's continue the fight.

Unions 'Face Suicide'

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec labor unions are being led down a suicidal road by radical strategists whose aim is to wreck the present system, says a veteran industrial relations expert.

Abbe Gerard Dion, 59, professor of industrial relations at Laval University and long-time social reformer, sees anarchist tendencies coming from the left and right of Quebec's volatile political spectrum.

The priest-professor-editor said in an interview Thursday certain union strategists bluntly espouse destruction of the system, "apparently not thinking that the result of what they want would finish them."

"They speak of political systems and social systems but they forget that unions are also part of the system," said Father Dion, referring to union security clauses protected by legislation in the North American pattern of industrial relations.

The interview assumed unusual realism when the tide of unrest flowed, figuratively speaking, to the very doorstep of Father Dion's office on the Laval campus. Noisy but good humored activists, fresh from a meeting, went from door to door demanding that the building be cleared—but the professor sat tight and his secretary pointed out to the visitors that she had not been invited to the meeting.

REACTION TO JAILING

This was a mild manifestation of reaction in various parts of Quebec to the jailing on contempt-of-court convictions of Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, and Roger Charbonneau, president of the Quebec Teachers' Corp.

Father Dion said he sees the jailings as part of a "scenario" or pattern emerging ever since the three big union federations linked in a common front last year.

The three leaders wanted the "halo of martyrdom and they got it," said Father Dion, adding the prediction that they will appeal at a judicious time.

'Why Did They...?'

BELFAST (UPI) — Mrs. Pauline Hyland sat in her small terraced home Thursday and wept.

"Why have they done this to my little girl?" she asked. "She's a good girl. She never harmed anybody."

Her 15-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, lay in a hospital bed half a mile away, the victim of an Irish Republican Army punishment squad. (See also Page 2.)

"I know nothing of these things they say she did," Mrs. Hyland said. "But I know Elizabeth would never take drugs for money from the police."

Elizabeth, her blonde hair shorn and doused with tar and feathers, was taken to hospital Wednesday after her public humiliation at the hands of the official wing of the outlawed IRA.

The IRA accused her of being a member of a police spy ring, of taking drugs and money in return for information.

A crowd of 200 watched her punishment at Theodore Street in the Roman Catholic Lower Falls Road area, just a few yards from where her ailing mother was recovering from an operation.

Mrs. Hyland, the mother of six, received a second blow as she sat sobbing in her home.

Her 19-year-old daughter Alice revealed that she, too, had been tarred and feathered a week ago.

"I didn't want to tell mother because she isn't well," Alice said, "but now she might as well know."

Alice said she was seized by a group of men who told her they were official IRA. They poured tar and feathers over her, but did not shave her head. She was admitted to hospital last Friday.

"I told my mother it was for my nerves," Alice said.

From her hospital bed Elizabeth said her recollection of what had happened was hazy.

"I was blindfolded and taken from my home Friday by a number of men and girls. They kept moving me from house to house and I never knew where I was," she said.

"I don't know how people can be so cruel," said Mrs. Hyland, who is due back in hospital next week for another operation. "We try to live without harming anyone — why can't they leave us alone?"

Mrs. Hyland said she was horrified that her Catholic neighbors in the Lower Falls had just looked on.

"There was no one, no one at all to help my girl," she said.

ALL MINERS DEAD

Times News Services

KELLOGG, Idaho — The last of 91 bodies was found by rescue teams as they completed combing the underground tunnels of the Sunshine silver mine here.

Teams found 44 bodies Thursday. Another 108 of the original 201 working in the mile-deep mine got out quickly when fire struck May 2.

Two miners — Ron Flory, 28, and Tom Wilkinson, 29, were found alive one week after the fire.

Several inquiries are under way into mine safety precautions and cause of the fire, which started somewhere between the 3,100 and 3,700-foot levels.

CHURCHILL WAS 'MENACE'

LONDON (AP) — Lord Wigg, a former government minister, says Sir Winston Churchill was "a national menace" whose policies hastened Britain's decline as a world power.

A member of former prime minister Harold Wilson's Labor government, Lord Wigg told reporters that "the sooner Britain exorcises the romanticism of the Churchill years the better it will be for the country."

New Violence Hits Ulster

BELFAST (AP) — British troops and marauding bands of guerrilla gunmen clashed through the night in Ulster.

With guerrilla violence apparently on the upturn again after two weeks of relative quiet, Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, William Whitelaw, was expected to come under increasing pressure from the majority Protestant community to crush IRA strongholds in Londonderry and Belfast.

In Londonderry, soldiers and Irish Republican Army snipers shot it out in several sectors. No casualties were reported.

In Belfast, however, three troopers were wounded in a gun battle in the IRA-dominated Roman Catholic district of Ballymurphy. The army said one gunman was hit.

The shooting followed a day of violence. One British soldier was shot dead, a bullet in his throat, and two guerrilla bombs wounded 39 people.

Jaunt in Helicopter Offered in Raffle

Greater Victoria's Environmental Centre is offering unusual prizes in a raffle to raise operating funds.

First prize is a 30-minute helicopter ride over Victoria. The winner can specify where he wants to go, such as over his own house.

A sailing yacht trip around Discovery Island is the second prize, said spokesman Donald Smith. It will be in the boat of Ian Stewart, past president of the environment group.

There are an unspecified number of third prizes, potted Christmas trees which can be "recycled" by planting in the garden after they have done their duty over Christmas.

The helicopter ride is being donated by Vancouver Island Helicopters.

Smith said tickets are 25 cents each and will be available Friday at Mayfair and Colwood shopping centres, Eaton's and Project Recycle, at Borden and McKenzie. They are also available from the centre's office at 1208 Wharf and from group members.

Times nature columnist Freeman King will draw winning tickets at the Jaycee Fair May 19.

The Environmental Centre, originally known as Environment 100, is a citizens' project to provide the public with factual and objective information on regional environment issues.

... UNIONS

"They have 30 days to appeal. They don't have to appeal immediately, and an immediate appeal would have tarnished their haloes. The political effect of an appeal made, let us say, the day after sentencing, would have been destroyed but this way they can keep the glory of martyrdom. If their aim is to politicize the population, they had to go to jail. If I were them I would have done exactly the same thing."

Father Dion said he has no reason to change his diagnosis of last November that four disturbing trends were troubling the union movement: 1. politicization; 2. radicalization; 3. contempt for law; 4. resort to violence.

SOME SUCCESS ACHIEVED

Some success in these aims had been achieved but "what will be the long-run effect?"

"I suspect it will be contrary to what the strategists want, not only within unions but in the population generally. I feel that a few months hence will see a break within the labor unions. There will be a split if they continue supporting the present orientation."

Father Dion said union members and citizens generally were being inflamed by "'packed meetings and 'packed' information" in the sense that an exaggerated view has been spread of radical strength.

"I feel the mass media have a great responsibility and if there is a panic—I am not saying there is one, but if one happened—their responsibility will be much more."

Editor of the bilingual quarterly Industrielle Relations, Father Dion said only a few men are required to take over a radio station or spread a keg of nails on a highway bridge, but incidents of that kind receive big headlines in the press.

BLAMES HEADLINES

"Of course people must be informed but they should be informed of the importance of various items in the news. Big headlines make a certain impression."

Asked to speak on union agitation in relation to separatism, Father Dion replied:

"We should not confuse the two things. But in one way they are according to the same trend. The union strategists could realize their ends only with separatism.

"Moreover, they have the support of some separatists who believe in the use of any means to weaken the government in power. And some anarchists are separatists because they use separatism the same as they use anything else."

These were radicals of the left, but Father Dion said there are examples on the right—extreme to the point of anarchy— to prove politics makes strange bedfellows.

The professor said he is speaking out on the union question because he believes deeply in the labor movement which is "absolutely necessary in any democratic society."

DESTROYING UNIONS

"Today, those who appear to be much in favor of unions are destroying them. If you ask whether these strategists have succeeded in their aims, I will say yes and no.

"Yes, because what they are planning is politicization of everything and they succeeded in that. They also succeeded in creating social agitation, which they wanted to create a climate or, to use their own terms, the objective conditions for revolution.

"But there is another aspect. Did they succeed in getting all the workers and population with them? No. It is very clear that the rank spite of all you can read in and file is not following in newspapers."

Father Dion cited as proof the common front's April 21 decision to cancel an appeal for a general strike because of lack of support.

"On the day Pepin-Laberge-Charbonneau went to jail, if you listened to radio and TV, you were told that thousands of workers were there. Later the estimate was between 1,500 and 2,000. What is 2,000 in a city of 400,000? And 30 buses came from Montreal . . ."

... VIETNAM

One senior military spokesman did say, however, that the cruiser Oklahoma City has steamed from Haipong and is bombarding fire on the new Red offensive capital of Quang Tri.

Shells from the ship have destroyed large ammunition dumps in the city, he said.

A Soviet freighter has been turned back from one of the mined North Vietnamese ports, according to the Pentagon.

REPLACE MINES

A U.S. defence department spokesman says that 24 other ships en route to Haiphong are still several days out of port. He added that if Soviet or Chinese minesweepers attempt to clear the harbors, the U.S. would probably simply replace the mines rather than risk an international flareup by attacking the ships.

This is a softening of U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird's earlier stand that force might be used to keep minesweepers from clearing the channels.

"It only took a few minutes to put those mines in," the spokesman said. "We can put in new ones faster than they could clear those out."

It is also felt in Washington that — despite protests to the blockage from Moscow — President Nixon's planned visit to the Soviet Union will go ahead without any hitches. He is scheduled for summit talks in the Kremlin, May 22.

On the homefront, protests against increased war activity continued to spread across the U.S.

More than 1,000 arrests have been made as a result of demonstrations in 23 states and the District of Columbia.

A state of emergency has been declared at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

UN CLOSED

And, in New York, the headquarters of the United Nations was ordered closed to tourists today after a demonstration by 300 people.

Other incidents flared in centres across the country from Boston to Los Angeles.

Despite the wide-ranging protests, one U.S. television network claimed Thursday night that the majority of Americans are solidly behind the president's decision to escalate the war.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. H. B. Graves, an anaesthetist at Vancouver General Hospital, has been elected president of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of B.C. Other 1972 officers are vice-president Dr. W. H. White of Penticton and treasurer Dr. C. H. Coady of New Westminster.

occupied today and, at Amos, in the same general region, CHAD was taken over. CHLC in Hauterive was back to normal operation today after being occupied by union members for 10 hours.

Three high schools in the Rouyn-Noranda district were inoperative with 40 per cent of the teachers in the area out.

Three mines were closed by work stoppages at Normetal, Lac Duffault and Chibougamou and three sawmills were paralyzed at Amos.

Protesters have disrupted traffic at various times this week from Sept-Iles, where vehicles had been used as roadblocks, to Royn-Noranda, where 300 demonstrators blocked the main road across the Ontario border to Kirkland Lake early today.

Nails were dumped on Montreal Island bridges Thursday, and this same tactic was used on Quebec City-area roads today, severely disrupting traffic flows in each case.

Court proceedings at several Montreal courthouses were cancelled today until Monday.

The three acting leaders of a common front of Quebec's three major labor federations met for two hours in jail Thursday with the imprisoned federation presidents to discuss possible appeals by the latter against their one-year sentences.

Details on the talks were not available.

Provincial government comment on the unrest has been sparse.

FBI OPENS ITS DOORS TO WOMEN

WASHINGTON (WP) — Acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray plans to announce today that women may apply for positions as special agents of the bureau for the first time in the agency's history.

Justice department sources said that Gray decided Thursday to make the sharp break with the FBI's men-only tradition after discovering — to his apparent surprise — that there was little opposition to the move among the bureau's 15 powerful assistant directors.

At a meeting with the assistant directors and other top FBI officials Gray also ordered a staff study of how the bureau can increase the number of blacks, Spanish-speaking Americans and American Indians among its corps of 8,600 agents.

Gray said after the meeting that he would take "a vigorous approach" to the recruitment of more minority group members.

"I want to convince these people that the Federal Bureau of Investigation belongs to all of the people of the United States."

Canadian Auto Men Fear D.I.S.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — Major United States auto producers may in the long term stunt their development in Canada because they have access to export subsidies at home, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Thursday.

Mr. Pepin, speaking during Commons budget debate, said Canadian representatives of Ford, General Motors and Chrysler told him last week that their U.S. parent companies have applied to the U.S. treasury department to set up domestic international sales corporations.

By setting up these subsidiary companies, U.S. manufacturers can indefinitely defer taxes on 50 per cent of their export profits. Canada regards this as a form of export subsidy.

The minister said none of the three companies expects that the U.S. D.I.S.C. program will have a short-term impact on investment, employment or production in the Canadian industry.

But none of them were sure about the effect of D.I.S.C. long-term investment plans of their parent companies in Canada.

Ford already has begun exporting cars to Canada through a D.I.S.C. subsidiary.

Mr. Pepin said General Motors and Chrysler representatives told him their companies have not yet taken any decision on whether they will export cars to Canada through the program.

American Motors, he said, has neither applied to set up a D.I.S.C. nor has any intentions of doing so.

Business Boost For Indians

A federal-provincial program to aid Indian business and training activities was approved Monday by the provincial government after two years of negotiations with Ottawa.

The program is arranged under the federal department of regional economic expansion and calls for equal sharing of some of the grants to disadvantaged Indians attempting to improve or set up commerical an industrial enterprises.

A cabinet order released today contained the draft agreement which is in Ottawa for federal approval.

The agreement stipulates that under the program, two thirds of those benefiting must be "of Indian ancestry" in "disadvantaged" circumstances.

In certain kinds of commercial enterprises, 20 per cent of the equity capital must be raised by the owner of the business.

The activities fall into five categories:

Provision of services and facilities that would open up undeveloped territory;

Development of recreational facilities producing employment;

Development of primary-resource producing activities;

Expansion or development of manufacturing, tourism and processing activities.

The fifth area provides for financial assistance for training and counselling for the above activities.

The Mercedes-Benz 250.

A most desirable sedan

The Mercedes-Benz 250 is a deceptive car. Under its neatly tailored bodywork lies the near perfect mating of suspension, brakes and powerplant that makes this jewel of a car a joy to drive.

You survey the world in lofty comfort from inside the 250. And so do your passengers. The rear seat holds three in comfort, and is definitely not second-class accommodation.

Four speed automatic transmission is standard. So is the all-independent suspension system, and the dependable power disc brakes on all four wheels.

This superb blend of components makes the Mercedes-Benz 250 a most desirable sedan. But the only way you can really appreciate this jewel is by taking a test drive. And when you do, we believe you'll want to make this the year you will finally own a Mercedes-Benz.

'That's Federal Business,' Says WAC on Pipeline

Premier Bennett refused to comment Thursday on the announcement that the U.S. government has approved the trans-Alaska pipeline.

"That's federal business," the premier said when asked about the decision by reporters.

Asked if he were not personally concerned, Bennett replied: "Certainly I am concerned. These are international matters." But he said to comment further "would be taking over the federal jurisdiction."

He noted the B.C. legislature has already sent a resolution to Ottawa expressing concern about the possibility of oil tanker spills along the Canadian Pacific Coast if the pipeline is built, and the shipping route opened.

The federal officer in charge of battling oil spills on the B.C. coast repeated today there is no known way of preventing the break-up of a giant tanker from becoming a catastrophe.

H. O. Buchanan, regional director of marine services, transport ministry, said from Vancouver he can't envisage how much equipment would be needed in such an eventuality but in any event there isn't that much on the entire North American west coast.

There is no way around a catastrophe if a tanker of 250,000 tons or bigger breaks up just off the coast, he said.

Buchanan was asked to comment on what effect the decision to permit the trans-Alaska pipeline would have on his plans.

He said if and when the pipeline is built and major tanker traffic down the B.C. coast begins it will certainly have a bearing on his operations. But he has not yet made any move related to Thursday's announcement.

For over a year Buchanan has been planning with other agencies co-ordinated actions in the event of spills. He has also been given a budget to stockpile a limited quanitity of supplies — slick lickers, booms and emulsifiers — to be based at Victoria, Vancouver and Prince Rupert.

Canada's top tanker route opponent, MP David Anderson of Esquimalt-Saanich, said that the battle was far from over.

He said Canadian opposition will be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary, a move made possible Thursday when a three-judge court of appeals in Washington said in a decision Canada may participate in a court test.

Anderson said the decision will at least mean more long delays in the construction.

"Rogers Morton U.S. secretary of the interior wants to go ahead but he can't," said Anderson.

A different view was expressed in Anacortes, Wash. by Mayor James Rice.

"I think it's great," Rice said of Morton's decision.

He said Anacortes, which has two oil refineries, will probably experience a slight economic boost as a result of the oil shipments.

Despite rejection of the Canadian proposal, several oil industry spokesmen in Canada said they thought a line would be built through the MacKenzie Valley anyway.

E. C. Hurd, president of Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Co. of Vancouver, said he is not surprised by Morton's announcement. But he added: "It would appear that within not too many years, a line up the Mackenzie River will be built."

W. O. Twaits, president of Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto said: "Our next job is to get a gas system and I don't think there is any doubt there will be a pipeline put in."

Bird-Listening Superb On a Still May Night

Someone has said that the night is a time for listening. Whoever my anonymous philosopher was, he was right — particularly about May nights.

If you'd like to put this theory to the test, try this: find some secluded spot, away from the noises of the city, sit down and listen. Choose a mild night with light southerly winds. The wind is important; if it is too strong you won't be able to hear; if it's not southerly there will probably be nothing to hear.

PATTERN CHANGES

What makes May so special? It's the month of night migration when, under cover of darkness, millions of birds are making their way north for the summer. May marks a conspicuous change in spring migration patterns. Up 'til now, most flights have taken place in daylight with species like blackbirds, geese, flickers and gulls being the most noticeable.

Now the tiny, so-called weak flyers take over and under the protective cover of night, complete the vernal half of their great annual journeys. Among them are many species of sparrows, warblers, shorebirds and thrushes which, through thousands of years of evolution have adapted to the perils of night travel, which for them are less than those of daylight travel.

IT TAKES TIME

But to get back to the listening, don't expect to be drowned in a sea of noise. Ears, under the continual bombardment of noise which accompanies modern city life, may take some time to adjust to the gentle sounds of night migration. Eventually, if you've chosen your night carefully and the birds are co-operating, soft sibilant calls will begin to drift down to you from the darkness above.

Sounds like peep, tsip, heep and seep will be your reward for patience. Not a great bonus, I'll admit, but when you realize that what you're hearing are the communication calls of birds, some of which may be on the final lap of 7,000-mile journeys, a sense of wonder may take hold of you.

Night migrants normally do not move in the dense flocks so familiar with diurnal flyers. They apparently (radar has helped to reveal the answer to this mystery) move in loose open flocks, with considerable distance between each traveller. Under these conditions, those gentle calls you hear from the night sky will be the tiny commuters keeping in contact with each other.

SHORT HEEP

Prominent among the sounds of early May nights will be one which can fairly reasonably be described as a short heep. For many of you the owner of this peculiar call will be a complete mystery. And yet when you walk the trails of Thetis, Mount Douglas, Goldstream and even Fort Rodd Hill from now 'til the end of June you are almost certain to be serenaded by this same bird, particularly if your walk is an after-supper jaunt.

Completing a journey which may have begun two months ago and as far away as Peru, our night migrant and evening songster, when eventually seen, turns out to be a rather nondescript brownish bird with a grey breast and a clear, slightly spotted throat.

What he lacks in color, he more than makes up for in song, for here — under the rather mundane name of Swainson's Thrush — is one of our truly gifted avian songsters. These birds, which at one time were more appropriately called olive-backed thrushes, are common residents of heavily wooded areas around Victoria where their flute-like notes occasionally penetrate the evening din of city life.

IDENTIFICATION

Fortunately for Victoria bird-watchers faced with the problem of identifying birds that have few conspicuous identifying marks, Swainson's Thrush is the only one of three brownish thrushes which summer in British Columbia that is regularly found around the Saanich Peninsula in summer.

If you try this night-listening game and come up empty-handed, there's still the Fort Rodd Hill parking lot. Every evening, along about sunset, the resident Swainson's Thrushes are in concert. And it's worth the price of gas to drive out and hear them.

In This Corner: Canada

The decision of U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers Morton to grant a permit for construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline does not means that this controversial project can now go ahead. But it certainly signals the probable outcome of the long dispute between conservationists on both sides of the border and the oil interests that plan to exploit the North Slope gas and oil resources.

Secretary Morton cannot yet grant the permit because of an injunction which, for the time being, bars this. But he has publicized his intent to proceed as quickly as this is possible. Further court cases already in prospect, and the estimate of the Alaska pipeline interests that it will be next year before construction can start virtually guarantee delays.

Of particular interest is the statement of the U.S. Court of Appeal, District of Columbia, that Canadian interests in the proposed pipeline must be considered in view of the prospective dangers of pollution from coastwise tanker traffic. At the same time the right of Canadian spokesmen to press their case before the Supreme Court of the United States was recognized — a ruling believed to be unprecedented — and this will provide an early opportunity for conservationist forces, among them Mr. David Anderson, MP, to carry the anti-tanker fight a step further. Two Canadian and three American groups have signified plans to plead the case before the highest court.

Secretary Morton's decision is based on two main considerations. One is the alleged need for speed in opening up the Alaska resources; and to this is added the desirability of keeping the entire supply within United States control. The alternative Mackenzie River pipeline route would involve Canadian construction and jurisdiction over the pipeline.

The urgency of the American need was emphasized by the action yesterday of President Nixon in ordering an increase of 230,000 barrels in foreign crude oil imports. This raises the quota to 1.735 million barrels a day. The Canadian share of these purchases was raised by 30,000 barrels to 570,000 barrels daily. The North Slope reportedly has reserves of 10 billion barrels of oil and 26 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

The effects and responsibilities of the Canadian land route would be very important to this country. The matter of financing the Mackenzie Valley route would be complex, for Canada cannot afford to become a minority voice in so vital a facility. The dangers to Canada's Far North ecology are also great, for much of the route would lie over the permafrost, with its peculiar problems, just as the trans-Alaska pipeline would do. The hazards of breaks in the pipeline cannot be overlooked, and far-reaching arrangements to meet possible emergencies would have to be part of any pipeline plan.

But the dangers—the almost inevitable prospect of a mishap — on the super-tanker route down the West Coast, from the Valdez loading port to the Puget Sound destination, are alarming. Experts predict that we might expect a major disaster once every 20 years, and this seems reasonable considering the storms, fogs and other coastal conditions which will afflict the huge oil carriers.

The effects of major spills, or even an accumulation of minor ones, on the shores of British Columbia, pose a very serious problem, and it is obvious the oil interests have given little consideration to the implications.

Against these factors, Secretary Morton's decision "in the interests of national security, balance of payments, and reliability of energy supply" is entirely one-sided. That may be his duty, but it does not serve the greater need for the preservation of the planet, including the Canadian part of it. The forthcoming court cases may be an up-hill battle, but they involve essential rights which in this era cannot be ignored.

By Any Other Name . . .

Improbable as it may seem to Westerners at present, the chances that the chairman of the Chinese Communist Party may one day be known to the world as Chairman T. T. Mao are growing. And that is not all. Early in April the president of the Chinese Academy of Sciences quietly announced that the Roman alphabet would gradually replace China's highly complex system of characters. Presumably this will mean the phonetic reproduction of Mandarin into Anglicized vowels, consonants and diphthongs.

Earlier excursions into language reform were halted during the "cultural revolution" but change is being re-instituted by the party officials. The suggestion has been raised that the Western reforms mean Chinese surnames will eventually be put last instead of first. So we could have Premier E. L. Chou as well as T. T. Mao.

No doubt educational progress will be served by the reforms and perhaps, in the long run, technological innovation and scientific research as well — since it is probably becoming ever more difficult to devise "characters" to explain nuclear science, for instance. But for people who tend to wax romantic about China the exquisite verse scroll characters can never be replaced by an alphabet whose virtue is compatibility with today's news or tomorrow's computer.

JAMES H. GRAY

How to Stop U.S. Takeovers

CALGARY — The trouble with the Gray formula for preventing American takeovers of Canadian business is that it is based mainly on ignorance; ignorance of what makes sellers go looking for buyers and vice versa. That's the opinion of one Albertan who has been on both sides of the transaction.

"It is basically a question of motivation," he said, "and if you don't understand motivation you don't understand anything."

On his own rise to modest financial eminence he bought out several smaller competitors. Then he became so successful that he was ground to pieces by lack of working capital. He sold out to a larger company.

Two Stages of Business Life

A successful business man, he said, goes through two stages of life. For the first 30 years he drives his enterprise ever onward and upward, plowing back all his profits into expansion. He is so busy with the present he has no time to worry about the long-term future of the business. The worrying stage comes when he passes 50.

By his mid-fifties the business man has it made. By the time he stops long enough to recognize that fact he becomes plagued with worries about how to keep it made. He worries about what will become of his business if he sickens or dies. It is his main asset. What will it be worth without his guiding hand? Who is there to step into his management shoes and match his acumen and drive?

Along about here the idea of selling out and retiring begins to gnaw at him. That, he thinks, will solve all his problems and safeguard his family's future.

If he is in the business of making or distributing widgets, wadgets or gadgets, it may be attractive to an American manufacturer contemplating expanding into, or across, Canada. In that case he can probably sell to the Americans for a lot more than Canadians could afford to pay. The Americans have all kinds of tax gimmicks going for them, and they have internal commercial considerations — markets for spillover end runs from their assembly lines.

Under the new law, what happens to the Canadian business man? If he is denied the right to sell to the highest bidder, the extent of that denial becomes in fact a capital levy even if it is not collected. This, then, over the long run becomes a disincentive to Canadian enterprise.

HERBERT GRAY
. . . to stop sell-outs

The problem, as he sees it, is not simply to keep Canadian enterprise out of American hands. It is to provide it with a longevity factor it now seems to lack. How, in short, can a sound and prosperous business be endowed with a life of its own independent of and extending beyond that of its founders?

"Perhaps," he said, "most of us are just too busy concentrating on surviving and growing to give proper thought to commercial immortality. Maybe we all should have spent more time grooming management personnel, bringing employees along to take over from us. But unless he has sons coming along, who among us gives any thought to management succession during the formative years of our business?"

"In the end we have left ourselves with no other choice but to sell out."

Well if the Gray formula will not stop sell-outs per se, what will? Our printer friend had a couple of ideas.

His first notion is that some solution must be found for the working capital squeeze of all business. He noted that government loans at low interest rates had been advanced to book publishers. Everybody could use that kind of accommodation.

"With the present price level and rising wage rates, the more business you do, even profitable business, the worse you are off. At first you run as hard as you can to get all the business you can. Then you must run even harder to get the money to pay for wages and supplies while you are waiting to get paid for the work you did two months ago. With interest rates so high, and costs rising steadily, it is a killing pace."

Canadian Investment

His second idea is for the government to encourage Canadians to invest in the common shares of the companies they work for. The government allows employees to deduct from taxable income all the money they channel into approved retirement plans. It will postpone its tax bite until the employees start collecting from the retirement savings fund.

Why not do exactly the same for investments employees make in common stocks? Now that the government is taxing capital gains, it will recoup its tax loss when the employee cashes in. It has a prime interest now in expanding its capital gains tax base. It can do so by encouraging capital investment exactly as it encourages savings investment.

Given such encouragement, said the printer, Canadians may create such a market for Canadian common shares that Canadian companies will no longer be forced to sell out to foreigners. The vast sums now going into retirement savings plans, he said, are all the proof you need that tax incentives work.

JAMES RESTON

Are They Ready for This?

WASHINGTON — There has usually been a difference in American politics between the strategy for winning the primaries and the strategy for winning the Presidency, and George McGovern is rapidly reaching the point where he will have to choose between the two.

He has come to the fore in the Democratic primary elections by being plain and definite, and attacking the things that are troubling a great many people: the war, the tax structure, unemployment, high prices, poor housing, and the staggering cost of military defence and overseas commitments.

In the process, he has defied many of the assumptions of American politics: that handsome candidates with theatrical TV personalities are the men for this cosmetic age; that moderate programs capture the vast majority of voters in the centre; that powerful well-organized forces, like the so-called "labor vote" or "Catholic vote" or "black vote" are essential to victory.

Drop-Outs

John Lindsay, the Lochinvar of the late night shows, and Ed Muskie, the Catholic with the most organized middle-of-the-road support, have dropped out, and now McGovern is left to fight it out against George Wallace on the right and Hubert Humphrey, who is still clinging desperately to what Arthur Schlesinger, who has now left him, originally called "the vital centre."

In a column the other day, I said that Senator McGovern had supported the legalization of marijuana, abortion, and amnesty for the Vietnam resisters. Pierre Salinger, the former Kennedy-Johnson White House press secretary, who is now working for McGovern, has since called to say the Senator is for amnesty, but not for legalizing pot, and not for Federal laws legalizing abortion. Instead, the abortion question, in McGovern's view, should be left to patient and doctor, and presumably to the widely different state laws. So it is important, on such controversial issues, to set the McGovern record straight.

Still, the question remains and it is the main question even after Humphrey's close victories in the Ohio and Indiana primaries: Is his obvious sincerity, blunt candor and radical populism good enough for the play-offs against President Nixon, in November, or only effective in the preliminaries and in the Democratic convention, where the young, the activist women and the blacks will be more powerful than ever before?

Obviously, this is not the main question on McGovern's mind now. He says the main thing is to defeat Nixon, but his immediate problem is to defeat Humphrey and win the nomination. But the further he gets out front, the more his party and the country have to look at his programs and at the campaign beyond the conventions, and it is here that the strategy for the primaries and the strategy for defeating Nixon come into question, if not into conflict.

McGovern is for a major redistribution of the nation's wealth and a major reduction in the nation's defence budget. He says he would take about $43 billions a year from taxpayers making more than $8,000 a year and give it to those making less than $8,000. He would have anyone making more than $50,000 a year pay 75 per cent of the excess in taxes, regardless of present tax shelters.

SENATOR McGOVERN
. . . approaching a choice

He would have a guaranteed annual income for the poor — $4,000 for a family of four — and he would cut the defence budget by about 40 per cent by reducing the armed services from 2.5 millions to 1.7 million and by bringing half the American troops home from Europe. Federal aid to elementary and secondary schools would go up five times to $15 billions and he wants school busing and a Federally funded guaranteed system of comprehensive health insurance for all Americans.

This is only the shorthand of his major proposals and probably makes it all look a little stark, but it illustrates both his success in the last few weeks and his problem in the next few. More than any other candidate, he has been specific. He has produced a 66-page manual of populist programs, which has made the other candidates seem vague and even evasive, and has helped single him out in the primaries as a serious man with a definite intention, and a well-organized and enthusiastic staff of young people who want to make fundamental changes in the country.

But now that he has taken the lead in the Democratic race, the question is whether the country as a whole is ready for changes of this magnitude, and whether his radical reforms if the tax structure, defence, welfare, housing and health will prevail against the President, who is still trying to capture the centre Muskie lost and Humphrey is still trying to put together.

McGovern says he thinks the country is ready "for major change," and he may or may not be right. It is certainly ready, after Johnson and Nixon, for some plain speaking and the kind of personal integrity that has usually illuminated George McGovern's career, but whether it is ready for his programs is another question.

Practical Politician

It should be noted that, whatever George McGovern proposes, he is no zealot but a very hard-minded practical politician, and if he gets the nomination by being definite and even radical, he will no doubt adjust to the realities of fighting Nixon for the centre, if he gets the chance, but this will not be easy.

For the very things that have brought him to the fore in the primaries — his plainness and bluntness and specific reforms — could be his problem in the fall campaign. His argument against President Nixon is that the President says one thing and does another, and he cannot very well get the nomination on a radical program and then switch to a moderate program, without being vulnerable to the charge that he is as wobbly and expedient as the man in the White House.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

No Hawk

I agree with the actions taken by President Nixon of the U.S. to stop the invasion of North Vietnam.

Mr. Nixon has, in my estimation, been very benevolent in the situation, whereas North Vietnam has not let up one minute.

He has tried by peace negotiations, etc., but North Vietnam does not seem to understand that South Vietnam wishes to go after democracy and the right to self-determination.

I wish people would realize that North Vietnam is the aggressor, that North Vietnam is the war criminal and that North Vietnam is guilty of more slaughters than the combined forces of the U.S. and South Vietnam.

It may sound that I am a hawk but I am not. I yell at unfairness, foul play and blithering idiots who cannot see the light of day. — James Fraser.

Long Life

I would like to pay a tribute to a fine old gentleman, who passed away on May 5 at the great age of 105 years.

Mr. Richard Smithson spent the last four years of his life at the Glenwarren private hospital. He was a man of great integrity, kindness, and chivalry. He had a great store of knowledge and wisdom, gained over a long life of hard work and experience in the early days, homesteading in Ontario.

He believed in God and the Golden Rule.

Mr. Smithson was a bachelor and he had a very keen sense of humor, and once asked to what he attributed his great age, he replied "I never drank — I never smoked — and I never married," although he had the greatest respect for women, and confided to me that he knew so many lovely girls, he could not choose from amongst them. His mind was bright and alert right to the end.

He loved to tell stories of the "old days" like the one about the year there was no summer in Ontario, and he drove a horse and sleigh on snow in July.

Many times I was a rapt listener to his tales of early life in Ontario.

He had outlived all his relatives and old friends, except a few nephews and nieces in Ontario who corresponded with him. He thought of them as still young, though he admitted his niece must be eighty.

One of his greatest thrills was when he was presented with the Centenary medal by the late Mayor Haddock, on Mr. Smithson's 104th birthday.

He was loved and respected by the matron and staff at the hospital, and by all who knew him. — (Mrs. H. E.) Dorothy Hubbard, 301-1935 McClure St.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of May 12, 1912:

Not only to Victoria but to the whole of Canada as well as many centres of the United States and the Old Land, the news of the death of Miss Agnes Deans Cameron at St. Joseph's hospital this morning came as a profound shock.

The news of her death spread rapidly through the city, causing a widespread feeling of sorrow. This was particularly poignant among the many Victorians who sat under her instruction in the public schools, and in whose welfare and progress she always manifested an intimate concern. They, above all others, feel that they have lost a close personal friend.

Subsidizing the Dividends of a Privileged Few

By ALEXANDER ROSS
The Toronto Star

George McGovern, who used to be known as a one-issue contender for the Democratic U.S. Presidential nomination, is a two-issue candidate these days, and the other issue is taxes.

In his Massachusetts primary campaign the South Dakota senator brought audiences to their feet by saying: "The tax structure is designed for the rich and powerful, at the expense of the average citizen of this land."

It's a system that can only be described as socialism for the rich; 40 per cent of the largest U.S. corporations, says McGovern, pay no federal income tax at all. It is no longer inconceivable that talk like this might make McGovern president of the U.S.

Which makes me wonder why opposition politicians in this country, with a federal election staring them in the face, haven't begun to exploit the same tax issue, in the same way. Research on the subject is scanty — so scanty, in fact, that it amounts to a major dereliction on the part of press and academia, which should be telling us these things.

But there is abundant evidence to support the notion that the taxes you and I have just paid to Ottawa are unnecessarily heavy, so that the taxes paid by large corporations (many of them foreign-owned) can remain conveniently light.

I do not pretend to have researched this subject thoroughly. It would take a task force of economists to do so. But ponder the following facts. None of this information comes from secret sources; it's all buried in corporate reports and federal tax statistics:

A decade or so ago, corporations in this country paid roughly as much federal income tax as individuals did. Since then, there's been a startling reversal. Personal incomes and profits have both roughly doubled. As you would expect in a rational world, corporate taxes roughly doubled during the same period. But the taxes paid by people didn't merely double; they quadrupled between 1958 and 1969. To me, the conclusion seems inescapable; As the country grows more prosperous, business is shouldering a smaller and smaller relative share of the total costs of running the federal government. People now pay twice as much to Ottawa as corporations do. The manufacturing classes in other words, are getting an easy ride at your expense and mine.

Although the corporate tax rate is around 50 per cent, the effective rate of taxation in many industries and for many companies, is much less. In the mining and petroleum industries — both predominantly foreign-owned—various tax breaks mean that most mineral companies pay a low rate of tax and many of them pay nothing at all.

Straightforward manufacturing industries usually tend to pay a straightforward tax rate, in the 50 per cent neighborhood. According to the latest corporation tax statistics from Ottawa for instance, the 392 firms in the beverage industry in 1969 declared pretax profits of about $224 million, and paid taxes of $108.5 million. This works out to an effective tax rate for the beverage industry as a whole, of about 48 per cent.

The metal mining industry — and here we're talking about 268 large firms — declared a pre-tax profit in 1969 of $610,882,000, and paid total taxes of $68,740,000. This works out to an effective tax rate of a shade less than 12 per cent. This statistic becomes even more interesting when you apply it to the tax experience of individual corporations. Here's what an afternoon's cursory investigation turned up:

● Shell Canada Limited, one of the country's largest branch-plant operations, declared profits between 1964 and 1969 of almost a quarter of a billion dollars. During this same six-year period, Shell Canada paid not one thin dime in federal income tax.

Shell does pay taxes now and points out that its tax-free years are the consequence of spending hundreds of millions of dollars on exploration that didn't pay off. Nevertheless, the oil industry as a whole pays an effective rate far below the "normal" 50 per cent. Government figures show that in 1969 the coal and petroleum industry, comprising 51 firms, declared $224.4 million in profits, and paid $40,118,000 in taxes — an effective rate of about 18 per cent.

● Dickenson Mines Limited since 1948 has taken more than $57 million worth of gold from its property in northern Ontario. During the seven years from 1964 to 1970, it received more than $3 million in federal subsidies, declared $4.47 million in profits and paid not one thin dime in federal income tax.

● Falconbridge Nickel Mines, one of Canada's largest, declared a net profit between 1964 and 1970 of nearly $216 million. During this seven-year period, Falconbridge paid a little less than $15 million in income tax.

● Cadillac Development Corporation is one of Toronto's biggest land developers, and one of the most prosperous. The value of its properties increased by more than 500 per cent between 1964 and 1969. During this same period, its profits increased by about 1400 per cent.

Cadillac Development Corporation has never paid federal income tax. It is probable that the other large Toronto development companies don't pay taxes either, but they're not public companies so we can't be sure.

It is impossible to say with precision how the new tax legislation will affect all these law-abiding corporations. Among the accountants I've consulted, the consensus seems to be: Not much.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce submits an annual brief to the finance minister. In this year's brief, the chamber urged tax cuts for business on top of the reductions Ottawa has already granted. The chamber also called for "tax incentives" to encourage capital investment.

The chamber speaks for what is still known in Canada as free enterprise. But no one — not the NDP, not the Tories, and most emphatically not the Liberals — seems to be speaking for the millions of hard-working people whose individual tax payments serve to subsidize the dividends of a privileged few.

Another load of destruction on its way.

The Sperm Bank Business

COMMONWEAL

There is nothing in America, it seems, without its exploitable side—nothing, not even vasectomies. Thus the sudden popularity of vasectomies (750,000 operations in '71; 1 million projected for '72) spawns another invention of American business genius: the commercial sperm bank, serving those who wish to lay away a little reserve for a rainy day.

Two dealers presently dominate the market: Idant Corporation, which will be in 20 cities by next year, and eventually England and Japan; and Genetic Laboratories, which began in 1970 and is already in five major U.S. cities.

Constance Holden writes about them and the commercial sperm-bank boom in Science, magazine of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. She writes not rhapsodically; she's got strong reservations about the whole business.

Sperm banking is perhaps the easiest "one-stop banking" one is likely to find. Ms. Holden explains the procedure at an Idant branch in suburban Baltimore: "The customer . . . strolls into Idant's small laboratory, which is manned only by a secretary and a laboratory biologist, fills out a form, and plunks down the $80 fee required for the processing and freezing of three semen specimens.

★ ★ ★

"He then retreats to a tiny room furnished with a comfortable armchair, two pornographic magazines, and an ashtray. (He may also drop off his sample on the way to work, providing it is less than two hours old at the time of deposit.) The ejaculate is examined, diluted with a glycerol preservative, and stored in 12 or 15 little plastic vials resembling ballpoint pen refills. The vials are stored in three metal cannisters and submerged in stainless steel barrels filled with liquid nitrogen, which bubbles away at its boiling point of — 196 degrees C. The customer, usually a man about to undergo a vasectomy, pays an annual storage fee of $18 until such time as he should change his mind or his wife, whereupon his semen is delivered to his wife's physician, who performs the artificial insemination."

So simple — but, as Contance Holden notes, so "disturbing."

Least disturbing is the fact that sperm-bank merchants are apparently promising more than they can deliver. An Idant spokesman says that sperm can be effectively frozen for up to 10 years; the American Public Health Association's population council warns, on the other hand, that the potency period may be as little as 16 months.

More serious, in Ms. Holden's opinion, is that there are virtually no regulations in any state to govern the sperm business ("Anyone with a few thousand dollars, some vials, and some liquid nitrogen can go into business.")

Ms. Holden does not bring up questions of religious morality per se, but she does broach the issue of practical ethics and finds the enterprise "in doubt."

★ ★ ★

Here she cites Mark Lappe of the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences in Hasting-on-Hudson, N.Y., who is disturbed that commercial outfits are the first to introduce large-scale sperm banking. Lappe feels that the promise of possible fatherhood in the future "plays on the basic anxieties of the male," and since most vasectomized depositors will never make a withdrawal, a sperm bank can supply just another way to parlay anxiety into money.

Scorched Earth Bombing

By ANTHONY LEWIS
The New York Times

American bombing and shelling since 1965 have produced 21 million craters in South Vietnam.

That is the estimate of a scholarly study published in this month's Scientific American. It is a figure so breathtaking that one must pause a moment to take it in: 21 million craters. On the land surface of a country the size of Missouri!

The study is by Professors Arthur Westing of Windham College and E. W. Pfeiffer of the University of Montana. They previously did an extensive report on the effects of herbicides in Vietnam. Their new study considers the long-term environmental impact of explosives. It is based on official figures, interviews and surveys on the ground in Vietnam and from helicopters.

★ ★ ★

There is a suitably methodical, dispassionate tone to the report. However, some who read it will not be able to remain detached. They will find in its charts and calm words a definitive indictment of American policy in Vietnam.

These are some of the findings:

● From 1965 through 1971, U.S. forces used 26 billion pounds of explosives in Indochina. That is twice what the United States used in all theatres in the Second World War.

● Of those 26 billion pounds, 12 billion were exploded in South Vietnam. That amounts to 497 pounds per acre in the country, or 1,215 pounds for every inhabitant.

● The bombs and shells are estimated by the study to have left 21 million craters in South Vietnam, displaced 2.75 billion cubic yards of earth and sprayed fragments over 26 million acres of the countryside.

The talks of acres and displaced earth cannot really evoke the human tragedy of Vietnam: The displaced and crippled people. However, every so often professors Westing and Pfeiffer offer a first-hand observation that gives human meaning to their statistics.

In the Mekong Delta they saw four-year-old craters in what had been rice paddies; the craters were deep in water, had tall reeds in them and were useless for rice-growing. The valuable forests of Vietnam, they write, have been bombarded so intensively that the trees are spotted with pieces of metal. That makes the trees rot. When they are cut for lumber, sawmill operators try to chop the metal fragments out by hand but cannot find them all; many saw blades are ruined.

If anything, the report probably understates the impact of American bombing. It covered only 1965-71, and some of the most intensive bombing has come this year.

★ ★ ★

The study concludes that there will be severe and long-lasting effects on the ecology of Vietnam including land erosion, destruction of farmland and forests, increased breeding of mosquitoes, and seepage of salt water into fresh water. It will be extremely difficult to undo the effects, the authors say. They note that craters from the First World War are still visible at Verdun.

The striking disclosure is not only the immense volume of American ordnance used in this war but the proportion of it used inside South Vietnam. In that small country, the one the U.S. is supposedly there to save, it has employed explosives with the energy of 363 Hiroshima nuclear bombs.

What the U.S. has done in Vietnam, then, is to follow a scorched earth policy. However, it has not been American earth that has been destroyed, or usually Americans who have been risked. Most of the destroying has been done from a distance. It has been a policy of Scorch Their Earth.

Recently I wrote that the bombing of Vietnam showed the United States to be, today, the most dangerous and destructive power on earth. Some readers found the statement outrageous. I think the Scientific American report confirms its truth.

★ ★ ★

After publication of these estimated figures on bombing and shelling, surely there can no longer be an argument about destructiveness. No other country comes close to what the United States has done in the past few years. As for being dangerous, at this moment informed people in London and Washington and elsewhere are deeply fearful that an insecure president, facing defeat, may strike some terrible and perilous new blow — not to prevent the defeat but to salve his pride with revenge.

It is painful for countries, as for individuals, to face the truth about themselves. But there is no way for the United States to rebuild its self-confidence or its reputation without facing the truth about what it has done in Vietnam.

Of course, there are those who dismiss concern about U.S. policy in Vietnam as the guilt feelings of sentimental liberals. To wage that kind of war, they say, shows strength in a practical world. I think it shows weakness. A policy of mass destruction appalls friends of the U.S. and wounds itself. Those who still favor that policy, after all that has happened, are the truly irrational men.

LIVING ON EDGE OF DESTRUCTION

By I. F. STONE

(From an article in the New York Review of Books after the renewed bombing of North Vietnam but before imposition of the blockade.)

No doubt Moscow and Peking are terrified of a nuclear confrontation. Nixon's strategy of spreading terror by unpredictability recalls Hitler. I do not compare the president to the Fuehrer, but in this respect their tactics are similar. Hitler won one Munich-style concession after another by them, but at a cost Germany and the world remember all too well.

If we move toward blockade, if we mine the harbors, if Moscow sends protective vessels and minesweepers, if the havoc done to Haiphong and Hanoi becomes unendurable even to the most appeasement-minded in Moscow and Peking . . .? The chances of the situation getting out of hand, through accident or loss of nerve or design, will multiply swiftly, the flash point at which neither side can back down may pass much too quickly for anything as archaic as the Congressional right to declare war.

Secretary Rogers told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that reintroducing U.S. combat troops and using nuclear weapons were the only options excluded in escalating the war against North Vietnam. How easily these limits could be swept aside by some unexpected catastrophe! It is time again to "Remember the Maine," whose mysterious and still unsolved sinking precipitated the Spanish-American war.

The simple fact is that the world as now organized lives on the edge of destruction. Everyone knows it but everyone tries to forget about it. Most of the planet can be incinerated within less than a day should a crunch get out of hand. This didn't happen over Cuba, but it may happen over Vietnam. If it doesn't happen over Vietnam, it may happen over the Middle East. If it doesn't happen there, there will be other flash points — Bangladesh was the first flicker of the lightning over the Indian Ocean, the newest theatre of confrontation. With each crunch, the probability — by sheer arithmetic — of its getting out of control will increase. The safety of mankind depends on somehow finding a way to a new world order in which no nation is so "sovereign" that it can press the button that may mean planetary extinction.

And what if Nixon "Succeeds"? What if he escalates the bombing of the North without precipitating a third World War? What a price to prove that he and America are not "chicken." How many must die in the smaller countries, how many millions elsewhere must be placed in jeopardy because a superpower suffers from an inferiority complex?

You Can Take a 25% Air-Fare Gamble

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

There seems to be a special air fare for everybody these days — everybody else, that is.

If you're very young or old you can get half fare on standby basis. If you want to travel overseas there are always charters.

But, if you're the average type and you want to visit ailing Aunt Martha in Toronto or see Montreal during your summer holidays — well, it's goint to cost. There are no special fares.

There is one exception. A little known publicized arrangement by which air fares are reduced 25 per cent for anybody travelling in Canada.

But there are a number of jokers in the deal. The 25 per cent reduction is open only to those who order and pay for their ticket two full months in advance of their flying date.

The more important stumbling block is that the special rate is not available during the summer holidays or during long weekends or any other time when there is likely to be heavy volume traffic.

Further, if you buy the ticket and pay for it and then find you have to cancel, you must forfeit 25 per cent of what you paid, unlike other air tickets which are refunded in full.

In short, the special rate is there but it takes special circumstances to be able to take advantage of it.

And the airlines do not promote the 25-per-cent-off special rate. They want to fill their planes with the 100 per cent customers if they can.

Claude Taylor of Montreal, a vice-president of Air Canada, was taken to task about the lack of special rates for the average traveller during his visit here for the convention of the Travel Industry Association of Canada.

He admitted the airline industry has come under considerable criticism over domestic air rates but said it would not be economically feasible to reduce fares across the board as airlines were earning a low percentage on investment compared with other industries.

As for standby rates for everyone? No way!

He said it is true that sometimes regularly scheduled flights take off with empty seats that could be filled with standby fares.

But if standby fares were available to everyone, flights would be empty right up to takeoff time. Everyone in the airport would be on standby.

The airlines are stydying the fare level and considering some kind of revision but the universal standby plan is not among feasible options.

The 25 per cent reduction is there for those who can make use of it. As for others, for the time being they will have to continue paying the full shot.

LONG-RANGE PLANNING THEIR GOAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new institute for research on public policy will concentrate on long range planning, Ronald S. Ritchie, its provisional director, told a Conference Board in Canada seminar Thursday.

Ritchie, who is also vice-president of Imperial Oil Co. Ltd., said the government must be equipped to deal with complex tasks.

"Whereas most policy research groups attached to government departments find it difficult for long to focus their attention on horizons beyond the next election, the new institute will concentrate on doing so," he said.

"The areas it will choose to study will ordinarily be those in which one can foresee policy issues five to 10 years hence."

In the current situation, he said, governments may work at cross purposes, battling unemployment but creating inflation or handicapping enterprise in one region through subsidized competition while trying to correct disparities in another region.

Earlier, Senator Douglas Everett suggested formation of a federal-provincial "stabilization council" that would serve as a watchdog on inflationary wage and price increases, submitting recommendations to government on action "to bring such increases back to reasonable levels."

Everett said the council could meet annually with business and labor leaders to determine short-term economic goals and for price levels objectives.

Wages and prices would be reviewed in reference to the price level goal and "those that are badly out of line would be publicly reported to the government," said the Manitoba Liberal.

Creation of such a council "when combined with sound, long-term planning" would result in a "growing, stable high employment economy."

U.S. Needs Help Bankers Told

MONTREAL (CP) — United States spokesmen used an international bankers' conference here Thursday to repeat "again, again and again" that other countries will have to co-operate to help the U.S. out of its balance-of-payments problems.

The sessions of the International Monetary Conference are closed but Gabriel Hauge, chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., told a news conference U.S. spokesmen made the point any time anyone was willing to listen.

Hauge said there were no major differences during discussion, but the main problem was how to reform world trade patterns.

"The U.S. said again, again and again that it has to do better in trade and in its current account.

"The question then arises of which countries are going to do less or worse to help the U.S. generate these different results."

NOT SINGLED OUT

Canada was not mentioned specifically but is one of the countries running a surplus in business with the U.S. Talks on a new trade agreement between the U.S. and Canada are stalled and there is no firm indication when negotiations will resume. Canada's postion is that the U.S. is demanding too much.

"The U.S. is no longer the giant of the economic world," Hauge said. "But have others accepted that?"

He said the discussion was a general review of issues of monetary reform and trade that had been discussed earlier during the conference which opened Tuesday and ends today.

He said the majority opinion appeared to be that the world will continue to work on a system of fixed par values for currencies, but with more flexibility involved. This would include more-frequent but smaller value changes.

DEPENDS ON BARGAINING

"But the extent of this flexibility still has to be negotiated," he said.

The conference also discussed the possibility of a single currency in the European Common Market. He said there was some caution expressed but a general welcoming of the concept because it would bring "greater cohesion" in monetary matters.

Inflation was a topic under review earlier in the day, with speakers from the 20 nations represented outlining the problems of their own countries. Few ideas on how to control inflation came forward.

Sir Alex Cairncross of St. Peter's College, Oxford, commented: "If we knew how to control inflation, we wouldn't be so occupied with exchange rates."

European speakers were reported "pessimistic that inflation could be brought under control and kept there."

Anybody can make a truck small. That's not the problem. The secret is building a truck that's just exactly small enough. Big enough to do the job, and then some. Small enough to do it economically. That's what's made the Datsun North America's number one selling small truck.
For eleven years, we've been learning about exactly what America wants in a small truck. And we've been delivering it. The Datsun Pickup has an overhead cam engine powerful enough for highway speeds and back road hauling, small enough for maximum economy.
The big six-foot all-steel load box is just the right size for 9 out of 10 small truck owners. The 1,400-pound gross load capacity is perfect for almost everyone's needs, from recreation to heavy labor.

Money Supply Hike Unprecedented

OTTAWA (CP) — An unprecedented expansion of the money supply held by the general public is evident in Thursday's Bank of Canada weekly report.

The bank deposits and currency held by the general public totalled a record $38.81 billion on May 3, an increase of $508 million from the week before.

It was an increase of $6.3 billion from last year.

Significantly, almost half the increase — $2.91 billion — came in the two-month period since March 1.

The expansion of the money supply may reflect general economic recovery and the impact of expansionary fiscal policies such as tax cuts and deficit spending which began with last June's federal budget. The mini-budget of last October continued the trend.

Also released Thursday were figures showing that assets of the chartered banks were $37.9 billion in April, an increase of $800 million from the March total and up almost $1.5 billion from January.

Business loans increased to $11.95 billion in March, the last month for which totals are available, from $11.009 billion in January, indicating increased business investment.

Unsecured personal loans rose to $5.897 billion in March from $5.768 billion in January.

Federal government deposits in chartered banks were $1.396 billion on May 3, down $255 million from the previous week and down $34 million from a week earlier.

Interest rates showed a mixed picture.

Day-to-day loans, taken out by investment dealers to finance daily activities, had average interest rates equivalent to 3.75 per cent on an annual basis, down from 3.8 per cent May 3 but still up from the 3.65 per cent of a week before that.

Government 91-day treasury bills were auctioned Thursday at interest rates of 3.6 per cent, compared with 3.63 and 3.64 per cent in the preceding weeks. The 182-day bills went for 3.93 per cent, compared with 4.0 and 3.93 per cent.

A special sale of $125 million in 364-day treasury bills Thursday yielded 4.72 per cent.

Yields on long-term government bonds averaged 7.19 per cent this week, up from 7.15 per cent last week but equal to the 7.19 per cent of the preceding week.

NEW TANKER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. has awarded a contract for construction of a coastal tanker to McKenzie Barge and Derrick Co. Ltd. of North Vancouver. The new tanker, with a capacity of 200,000 gallons, will replace the 34-year-old Imperial Nanaimo early in 1973.

Ithacan Suspends Operations

EDMONTON (CP) — Ithacan Development Group, an Edmonton company with holding interests in about $22 million worth of completed projects across Canada, has suspended operations.

Ithacan president J. L. Martin said the suspension "could last for upwards of a year," but the actual time would depend on how readily Ithacan's assets could be sold to meet about $910,000 in debts.

Financial difficulty arose last September, when $1.6 million refinancing arrangement involving the sale of debentures fell through.

Martin said his company is still on a sound financial basis, but the inability to raise the $1.6 million left the company "in a very serious cash position."

DIVIDENDS DOWN

TORONTO (CP) — Dividend payments by Canadian companies during the first five months of this year amounted to $572.9 million, down from $594.7 million during the corresponding period last year, says Bongard, Leslie and Co.

Miscellaneous industrial and utility companies reported an increase in total dividends paid while dividends of mining companies and financial institutions were lower than a year earlier.

In May, Canadian companies paid shareholders a total of $72.3 million in dividends, up from $70.3 million in May, 1971.

INDEX UNCHANGED

OTTAWA (CP) — The index of industrial production was unchanged in March from the February level of 184.3 and only slightly above the January level of 184.2, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The index measures Canada's industrial output and is adjusted to remove increases caused by inflation or normal seasonal variations.

Thus an increase in the index means a real increase in production and one that is greater than normal for the time of year.

Indexes for specific industries varied from a 4.9-per-cent increase for petroleum and coal products, 182.8 from 174.2 in February, to a three-per-cent decline in wood industries, to 163.6 from 168.6.

The index is based on 1961 production levels equalling 100.

'Evaluate Change Impact'

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Businessmen must be able to evaluate the impact of change and deal with it effectively, rather than reacting to situations after they occur, A. F. Johnston, vice-president of Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., said today.

"If we fail to do so, then confrontation with society and its institutions, including governments, will be our lot," he told the annual convention of the Canadian Electrical Distributors Association.

If this confrontation occurs, he said, "we will not have a chance to participate in writing the changes which will occur in the rules."

Johnston said there is a new generation of people which has a far different view of business than most businessmen. This generation objected to many things in business and was expressing its attitudes in many symbolic ways.

"Many of them tend to regard businessmen as being reprehensibly deceptive," he said.

"They say that the social responsibility goes beyond changing by stopping doing things that are harmful to our new value system, but that the past damage must be rectified."

Businessmen, said Johnston, must work hard to ensure that they will be able to participate in the future.

GRACIOUS CHARM

LOUISE WILTERMUTH 477-1841, 477-6307

908 ARCADIA $18,500

I may be an older type home but I have a lot going for me with three bedrooms, the living room and large kitchen on the main floor. I also have a private front porch, a roomy entrance hall and a handy back porch. And if Mother or Dad lives with you, maybe, they would like to have their own rooms downstairs. I'm not too far from the bus, the corner store or the three levels of school and you won't have to pay the government very many dollars a year.

IMPERIAL REFUNDS BUYERS OF PREFERRED SHARES

VANCOUVER (CP)—The president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange Thursday advised Imperial Marine Industries Ltd., that shareholders subscribing to preferred shares in the company should be given their money back.

Murray Pezim, who arranged for initial financing of Imperial Marine, said the money is being held in trust for the shareholders and can be obtained by approaching the firm.

The return involves about 103,000 shares at $2 each.

"In the opinion of the exchange, the performance of union securities Ltd. was an integral part of the rights offering of March 2, 1972, and the failure of Union to purchase all the preference shares not subscribed for by shareholders of the company, as required under the offering agreement, renders the entire offering null and void," said Thomas Dohm, head of the VSE.

Pezim said 103,000 shares had been taken up by shareholders, but he didnt know how many individuals were involved.

Record Year For CN

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian National Railways rolled to new operating records in 1971 while showing the best over-all financial record since 1966, the Crown corporation announced Thursday.

In spite of the improved picture, the company still had an over-all deficit of $24.3 million. But this was the lowest deficit since 1956.

The company's annual report, tabled in the Commons Thursday, says railway operating revenues totalled $1,140.8 million while railway operating expenses amounted to $1,119.5 million — both records.

The net railway operating income, or operating profit, was $21.3 million, highest since 1966.

With other operations added, the company's total net income was $44.2 million, down $1.6 million from the previous year. Besides railways, the company is involved in road and water transportation, telecommunications, hotels, real estate and international consulting.

The financial deficit of $24.3 million came after payment of $68.5 million interest on long-term debt.

RESULTS IMPROVED

N. J. MacMillan, CNR chairman and president, said economic sluggishness, a $56.7 million increase in wages and bad winter weather hurt railway revenues in the first half of 1971. But with the upswing in the economy and the strict control of expenses, railway revenue had increased and the company finished the year on a high note.

Payments under provisions of the National Transportation Act totalled $30 million, a reduction of $8 million from 1970. These normal payments on an annually declining scale provide financial assistance to railways until they begin to obtain benefits from the discontinuance or subsidization of uneconomic branch lines and passenger rail services.

Passenger rail revenue fell by 1 per cent as the number of passengers using the railway declined by 100,000 to 13.3 million.

But the carload freight income increased 12 per cent; express revenues were up by 9.7 per cent; hotel revenues climbed by 12.4 per cent, and telecommunications income increased 6 per cent.

Employment dropped 1 per cent to 81,744 over the entire CNR system.

Premier

Premier Cablevision Ltd. had revenue of $2,950,000 in the first quarter of 1972, up 11.8 per cent from the comparable period last year. Premier, which went public in December, reported first-quarter net profits of $637,266, or 20.7 cents a share, up 22.9 per cent from the corresponding period of 1971.

IT and T

International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., huge multifaceted corporation, has evidently not suffered too much from its stormy recent past.

The company discloses that profits in the first quarter of the year hit a record $91.6 million up from $80.7 million dollars in the comparable period a year ago. Sales and revenues surged 17 per cent to $1.9 billion.

Moreover, ITT's controversial chief executive officer, Harold E. Gensen, predicted that results for the full year will also reach new peaks.

Much of his formal speech to shareholders was given over to previously-stated defences of ITT's corporate behavior in recent time, which has been under constant scrutiny since disclosures by Washington syndicated columnist Jack Anderson.

Central CU

The British Columbia Central Credit Union reports assets of $67.2 million in 1971 compared with $51.8 million the previous year.

Net income was $917,000 compared with $830,000 in 1970.

B.C. Central is owned and operated in the interests of 214 credit unions and 82 co-operatives and related societies. It provides them with central banking facilities and other services.

Preston

Preston Mines reports net earnings for the three months ended March 31, 1972, were $1,470,000 compared with $1,316,000 for the same period in 1971. Earnings per share were 19 cents and 17 cents respectively.

Great Pacific

Great Pacific Industries Ltd., which owns and operates a nationwide fleet of leased vehicles, recorded total sales in 1971 to $9,640,420, up from $7,119,726 the year before.

The company said in its annual report that net earnings in 1971 totalled $255,928, or 25 cents a common share, compared with 1970 net earnings, after an extraordinary expenditure of $64,557, of $248,716, or 24 cents a common share.

In April the company announced the signing of a preliminary agreement with Neonex International Ltd., whereby Neonex will acquire Great Pacific's modular division companies.

The transaction, conclusion of which will see Great Pacific operate only in the automotive leasing field, will generate about $2.25 million to Great Pacific.

C. Distributing

Consumers Distributing Company Limited, Toronto, reports sales increased by 41 per cent to $7,081,000 for the three months ended March 31, 1972, from $5,023,000 for the same period a year ago. Sales for the same period this year for Consumers "National" were $1,609,000. The "National" company did not commence operations until September of last year.

Profits of Consumers Distributing for the latest quarter total $59,554 or 2.9 cents per share, a gain from $37,400 or 1.8 cents per share a year earlier. The 1972 earnings reflect Consumers' share in the operations of the "National" company.

City to Appeal $34,000 Award

Victoria city council decided Thursday to appeal a recent B.C. Supreme Court judgment which ordered the city to pay $34,900 to Aberdeen Private Hospital for the care of welfare patients.

The decision endorsed a recommendation by city solicitor Terry O'Grady, who noted in a report that a number of private hospitals throughout B.C. have successfully filed claims against municipalities.

O'Grady said he expects all the judgments will be appealed.

The amount awarded Aberdeen Private Hospital, in a decision handed down May 2 in Vancouver by Mr. Justice Peter Seaton, represents the city's share of increased payments for the care of welfare patients from February, 1968, to September, 1970.

In other business, council decided to discuss at a closed meeting Tuesday a letter from Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., in which the company denies ever giving an undertaking to close a service station at Scott and Hillside.

After the letter was read out, Ald. Harold Olafson said: "The facts as presented may be true in your eyes but not in mine."

He said Gulf Oil would not have received permission to build a larger outlet at Hillside and Shelbourne if the city had known the Scott-Hillside service station would not be closed.

Council approved a motion by Olafson to send carbon copies of all correspondence addressed to the company's branch office in Vancouver to its Ottawa headquarters.

Aldermen explained after the meeting that the purpose of the move is to keep head office aware of difficulties that arise between the city and the company.

Council gave first readings to a bylaw which would create a separate zoning category for service stations downtown and in industrial areas.

The meeting also gave final approval to the city's 1972 budget which will mean an over-all mill rate of 75.41 mills, an increase of half a mill over last year.

ENTHUSIASM HIGH

Attendance was low but enthusiasm high at a one-hour anti-Vietnam war demonstration held Thursday afternoon in Centennial Square.

And it's a good thing about the enthusiasm level because the demonstrators found out shortly after they began that the hand-held loudspeaker they were using was against the rules.

This was pointed out to them by city manager Bill Houson, who stopped by the gathering on his way home from city hall. The demonstrators were informed of the regulations and proceeded to make their speeches soapbox-style.

The demonstration, attended by only about a dozen people, was held by the Student Antiwar Committee. The protest was against the decision by the U.S. to mine North Vietnam harbors.

Most of the students were from area high schools. But because word of the demonstration did not spread until very late in the day, attendance was small.

Sterilizations Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Femal sterilization operations at Grace Hospital have increased six-fold since 1969, medical director Dr. W. R. MacEwan said Thursday. Last year 651 sterilizations were performed compared with 334 in 1970 anl 109 the year before.

COPTER HUNTING ILLEGAL

A cabinet order passed Thursday makes it illegal to hunt big game by helicopter in British Columbia and provides for fines of from $10 to $500 for hunters who try it.

Dr. James Hatter, director of the provincial fish and wildlife branch, said that the order would not be signed by the lieutenant-governor until probably today but to all practical purposes it is law now.

He said only B.C. and the Yukon in Canada have passed such a law.

The order makes it illegal to use a helicopter for stalking animals or transporting them and is particularly aimed at the protection of sheep, goats, caribou, grizzly or moose.

You Can Give $2,000 Tax-Free to Church

Tax-free donations to churches in B.C. and church activities elsewhere up to $2,000 annually are allowed under an order-in-council passed last week by the provincial government.

The new regulations are a clarification of the Gift Tax Act passed by the B.C. legislature earlier this year.

The order says the filing of a tax return is not required from an individual making "gifts up to an aggregate of $2,000 to charitable organizations."

The order also says a gift to a charitable organization for use in B.C. and for "a purpose initiated by, and of high priority to, the organization," of any amount in any one year is exempt from gift tax requirements.

This means, for example, that an individual cannot make a donation to a university and avoid tax by stipulating what it should be spent on. The university must initiate the request and describe the specific purpose.

Unions Reject Chabot Plea For End to Work Stoppage

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister James Chabot called for a moratorium on lockout and strike activity in the British Columbia construction industry Thursday, but union spokesmen almost immediately rejected his suggestion.

Chabot proposed that the Construction Labor Relations Association lift its province-wide lockout, which enters its third week today, and that unions refrain from strike action for 30 days.

During that time he suggested that negotiations resume, with the help of a mediator, and after the 30-day period, if agreement has not been reached, that the dispute be turned over to an arbitration board for binding settlement.

The CLRA, which bargains for 840 contractors, said it was "reluctant to accept the principle of arbitration," but would go along with the minister's proposal if the unions would.

Chabot said he did not expect a definite answer from the unions for a week because council left Thursday to attend a week-long Canadian Labor Congress convention in Ottawa.

However, Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C. and Yukon Construction and Building Trades Council, had a definite rejection of the minister's arbitration proposal followinga council co-ordinating commitee meeting.

"The principle of binding arbitration is totally unacceptable to the building trades and to accept it would give a big advantage to the contractors," he said.

"We are still prepared to continue negotiations but will not go back under the terms of binding arbitration."

An estimated 30,000 members of 18 construction unions and about $500 million worth of construction are affected by the lockout, which began in retaliation for selective picketing against CLRA member contractors.

The unions have rejected a two-year contract offering an 88-cent-an-hour increase in wages and fringe benefits. They are asking increases ranging over 10 per cent in one year to almost 60 per cent over two. Also in dispute is the length of the work week which the unions want reduced to 35 hours from 37½.

Meanwhile, the carpenters union has won its court action against the CLRA and eight member contractors, obtaining a B.C. Supreme Court injunction against the contractors for locking out carpenters while union certification bids are still pending.

The injunctions were similar to those granted last week to the plumbers union against 31 firms.

PARK RESERVE CREATED

Creation of a 21-acre park reserve around Smith's Hill reservoir was approved by Victoria city council Thursday.

The new park, second largest in Victoria after Beacon Hill Park, is bordered by Cook, Blackwood, McNair and Topaz.

An attractive mixture of rocky hillside and woodland, it offers panoramic views of the city and surrounding countryside.

Parks commitee chairman Ald. Ove Witt said the park would be a "tremendous asset" to Victoria.

Bennett Seeking 100 Henry Fords

Premier Bennett says his plan to provide loans to help establish small firms will turn up business talent in the form of "100 Henry Fords."

There will be "tens and tens of millions of dollars" available for the program, the premier said.

Bennett has promised to introduce legislation to establish a crown corporation to help start small processing plants at the next session of the legislature.

He said Thursday that at the start, loans granted by the corporation will be almost interest-free.

NO DEVIATION

In response to questions, Bennett said the policy will not mean a change in Social Credit government thinking, which has traditionally frowned on such favors to business.

Bennett said details of the kinds of loans will not be made public until the corporation is formed, but he mentioned processing plants and farm industries as the kind of businesses that would be suitable.

REPAYABLE

Potential businesses that would take advantage of the loans would be those who were either unable to get any capital at all or those who found loans on the private market too expensive.

The loans would be repayable at "anytime without penalty and without notice," he added.

Small business venture loans would require personal guarantees to secure the loans.

His policy will apply to "all parts of the province — not playing one region off against the other."

Bennett equated the system with the incentives the government provides through loans and grants to individuals to own their own homes.

"Now we're giving the individual the chance to get into the business world. I expect that we will have at least 100 Henry Fords the First."

Bennett also drew a comparision with the government's help in establishing the Banks of British Columbia, from which it has now withdrawn completely.

DEAL WITH TORIES DENIED

Premier Bennett Thursday denied he has struck any deal with the Progressive Conservative party to destroy the provincial Liberals.

Bennett was asked about a "deal" which Liberal leadership aspirant David Anderson referred to at a nominating convention earlier this week in North Vancouver.

"If he's making this kind of untrue statement before he gets the leadership then nobody will believe him because there's no truth to it at all," Bennett replied.

Bennett said he has no arrangements with the Conservatives, and added that in the federal field he does not plan to support any Conservatives or Social Credit candidates in the next election.

Heavy Water Bill Ups N-Plant Price

OTTAWA(CP)—Canada has paid an extra $30 million since 1966 to run its nuclear atomic energy plants because of a shortage of heavy water, J. L. Gray, president of the Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., said Thursday.

He told the Commons natural resources committee the power stations have been paying at least $10 a pound more over the last few years because of the unanticipated shortages from Canadian plants.

He agreed with R. J. Thomson (NDP—Battleford-Kindersley) that AECL should take more interest in assuring heavy water supplies are available.

He estimated supplies should be sufficient by the first few months of 1974. Production problems with the Canadian General Electric Plant at Port Hawkesbury, N.S., now have been solved and the plant is operating at about 60 per cent capacity, he noted.

It will still be a few weeks before production increases.

The heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S., which the AECL took over from the provincial government last November, should be in production by 1975, he said. If the Glace Bay plant had been ready on schedule in 1966, Canada might have advanced farther, he said.

"If there was 1,000 tons of heavy water available (from Canadian plants), Ontario might have contracted for another plant by now."

NEW PLANTS POSSIBLE

He told Maurice Foster (L—Algoma) AECL is considering two nuclear power plants in New Brunswick and one in Quebec, but no decisions have been reached. The New Brunswick plants could sell about three-quarters of the power produced to the United States.

He said some talks have been carried on with people in British Columbia—"but not with the premier"—about a nuclear plant for Vancouver Island and predicted "B.C. will be putting in nuclear power in 10 years."

An atomic energy spokesman said later that the talks were with B.C. Hydro and the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce.

AECL is not against hydro power and proposes that good sites should be used when the power dams wouldn't interfere with the environment, he said. But nuclear power is better in many areas, such as the Nanaimo area.

Mom's Day Parade

Victoria Scouts and Guides will hold a church parade Sunday — Mother's Day — at Beacon Hill Park bandshell, starting at 2 p.m.

They will assemble on the front lawn of the legislative buildings at 1 p.m. The parade through Beacon Hill Park will be led by the Rainbow Sea Cadets' band, followed by Guides, Brownies, several hundred Cubs, Scouts, Venturers and Rovers and Sea Scouts.

Rev. Ivan Futter of St. Stephen's Anglican Church will conduct the service.

Log Supply Enough for Month

B.C. Forest Products will have sufficient logs to keep its three Victoria mills in operation into next month, senior manager Walter Nelson said today.

He said the company still has some fallers working but how long the mills can operate "depends if they continue to work."

The two sawmills and plywood mill, off Gorge Road, employ close to 1,000 persons.

In the Alberni Valley, notices have appeared at two mills warning of a closure because of log shortages. The mills are Alberni Pacific division and Somass A mill of MacMillan Bloedel and the notices said they will have to close May 31.

Somass B mill and a connecting shingle mill could close June 15, said a company spokesman.

Some 400 employees would be involved at Alberni Pacific and 420 at Somass.

In Vancouver, Mr. Justice Victor Dryer of the B.C. Supreme Court said Thursday the main issue to be decided in MacMillan Bloedel's action against 34 fallers is whether the fallers' decision not to work April 18 was made as a group or on an individual basis.

He made the remark as counsel for both sides made final submissions at the conclusion of evidence.

The company alleges the fallers are guilty of contempt of court for allegedly disobeying a Jan. 21 injunction prohibiting concerted slowdowns and illegal work stoppages at its Franklin River operation.

It alleges the Franklin River fallers did not go into the woods April 18 in a concerted effort to force the company to accelerate negotiations with the International Woodworkers of America on a pricing formula for fallers.

The fallers agree that no work was done April 18 but deny they acted in concert. They contend that decisions not to work were made as individuals and thus did not violate the injunction.

Court was told that a group of fallers on their way to the Franklin River camp were flagged down by two persons who pointed to a sign saying "Fallers only. Emergency meeting re Nemetz report 9 a.m." (Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz settled a forest industry contract dispute two years ago.)

The fallers left their bus to investigate and returned to Port Alberni to discover there was no meeting. Fallers living in camp also heard about the sign and did not work.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister James Chabot was meeting the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations separately today in Vancouver to discuss contract talks.

FIR, representing more than 100 timber companies in the coast area, has said meaningful discussions cannot occur until 800 fallers return to their jobs.

The fallers have stopped work in a dispute over new pricing formulas, which were to have been worked out following the 1970 coast industry contract settlement.

A spokesman for wildcatting timber fallers said Thursday top earners are prepared to take wage cuts up to $50 a day in order to win a standard coast-wide pricing formula.

"There is no question about it, some of the camps, where the big money is, are going to lose that much," he said.

"But all the fallers have agreed to this . . . just so we can get a written standard agreement."

The spokesman declined to be identified because of court injunctions against the fallers.

Forest Industrial Relations, the industry agent, has said the fallers don't only want to revise upward their existing pricing formula, "but increase wages by 10 to 50 per cent beyond that."

Praise in the Night Is Better Than None

If there's a corner of heaven set aside for good writers — and there really ought to be — I fancy that Ralph Allen will be there and that he'll be proud and pleased at what's going on in Oxbow, Saskatchewan.

Ralph was a modest, self-effacing man and, indeed, had no cause to appear otherwise since his accomplishments and reputation as an editor, writer and historian were recognized early in his career. At the time of his death six years ago no other Canadian in his craft was as respected and loved by his fellows.

Yet, modest or not, every writer is fortified by praise — needs it in his lonely craft — and I have been remembering the night when I had a hand in that.

What's happening in Oxbow, to get to that first, is that the editor of the weekly Oxbow Herald, Patrick Armstrong, has purchased the railway station there and will make it a museum in memory of Ralph. Come July the CPR will be barrelling right through Oxbow without a stop and so the old station-residence, where Ralph's father, Glen, was agent, and where Ralph spent his boyhood, came up for sale. Editor Armstrong got it for $200. Various memorabilia from Ralph's career will be on view.

The news item on this pleasing event sent my mind back to the time, immediately after the war, when Ralph's first novel, "Home Made Banners," was published and became an over night flop. It was and is a fine story, beautifully written, but Canadians then had had a bellyfull of war. The book was never to earn the sales or the recognition that it richly deserved.

★ ★ ★

Its failure to penetrate or even near the best-seller lists obviously weighed on Ralph's mind when he came to Vancouver to help with the customary promotion.

"Come to the autographing session tonight," he said, wryly, when I'd picked him up at the airport, "if you can fight your way through the crowds of three or four people I'm attracting."

When I said that I thought "Home Made Banners" a classic of its kind he was not mollified. "The only way this book will be remembered," he said, oozing gloom, "is if someone manages to engrave it on the head of a pin."

I volunteered to help him drown his sorrows that night after the autographing business at Duthie's, said I'd phone him at his hotel when I'd finished my newspaper chores and we parted.

I had an interview scheduled in the late afternoon with Jimmy Durante, who was then appearing at the Pacific National Exhibition, went to the Hotel Vancouver, had a hilarious hour of chat with the great man, then went back to the office and wrote my story. Durante had suggested I join him later to see Frankie Laine's early show at the Cave. We rendezvoused there.

Frankie Laine came to our table after his performance and he and Durante and the others in our party decided they would move on to the Palomar Supper Club to hear the great swinging band of Sandy DeSantis. I phoned Ralph to join us there and said I would make arrangements with the doorman.

"I'm in no mood to be ebullient, Ralph said, "but I'll come anyway." I had never heard him so doleful.

I was very, very busy for the next half hour. I spoke to Frankie Laine and Jimmy Durante in the cab. I spoke with the Palomar doorman. I spoke with DeSantis and with Ethel Lang, his statuesque platinum blond singer and, backstage, with the creamy young ladies of the chorus in the Palomar show.

★ ★ ★

When Ralph joined our party of a dozen or more at the supper club he seemed in a daze. He bent down and whispered in my ear, "When I gave the doorman my name he told me that Home Made Banners was the best book he'd ever read. What do you make of that?"

"Just what it deserves," I assured him and, standing, introduced him to the others.

"Not the writin' Ralph Allen?" Durante wheezed, registering, entirely with his nose, wonderment and incredulity. "Man, oh, man, that Home Made Banners! That's some book!"

"Couldn't put it down," exclaimed Frankie Laine, the man with the brass lungs, a man who never in his life had read anything but the Daily Racing Form. "Sit down right here, Ralph. We're gonna drink to that!"

Murmurs of praise passed about the table as DeSantis, the gorgeous Miss Lang and a covey of chorus girls approached our table. They each bore slips of paper. They ignored Durante and Laine and clamored for Ralph's autograph.

"It's an honor, sir, to have you in our club," DeSantis beamed. He bounded back to the microphone. "A round of applause, ladies and gentlemen, for Mr. Ralph Allen, the famous novelist! Take a bow, Mr. Allen!"

Ralph stood up, smiling his lob-sided smile, and graciously accepted the plaudits of the people of the night. Now the big DeSantis band went into action and as the dancers came by our table every speculating eye was on Ralph. They might not remember it in the morning, but they were seeing the making of a literary legend.

The hangovers next day when I drove him to the airport were of truly monumental dimensions. Ralph spoke not a word about the night before until we reached the departure gate. Then he gravely shook my hand and grinned.

"If I live," he said, "I'll do the same for you one day."

WORKING-UP TRIALS for the 1972 Swiftsure begin this weekend for the navy's 91-foot Bermuda ketch, largest yacht in the race. Beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday, the colorful campaigner will be going through her paces in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, manned by volunteers from the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. Next week her crew will start a full week of training, ending the day before the race, which begins 9:30 a.m. Saturday, May 27, off Brotchie Ledge. A record fleet of 220 boats is expected to compete in the annual classic. (Jim McVie photo.)

Crisis Line Given Grant

Victoria's telephone crisis line — NEED — will receive a $2,500 grant from the B.C. government's drug abuse fund, Education Minister Donald Brothers announced today.

Brothers, who is chairman of the drugs, alcohol and tobacco abuse council which administers the fund, said the latest grant would bring to $10,000 the amount awarded by B.C. to the organization. NEED was one year old on Wednesday.

The Crisis Line has more than 100 trained volunteers answering distress calls on a 24-hour basis. It does not ask the name of callers. To date it has handled about 7,000 calls.

In recent days the organization has been on the verge of folding for lack of funds. It takes $2,000 a month to meet its expenses.

★ ★ ★

Co-ordinator Dave Steward was elated with the news today.

"It's very timely," he said. "It'll help us go for awhile longer while we try to find more fundamental financing."

Stewart is NEED's only full-time staff member. A former psychology student, he has a part-time assistant and a part-time secretary on salary. NEED's other major bills are for rent, phones, heat and light and office supplies.

The provincial government awarded the organization a $7,500 grant in November. Other help has come from the federal government, local service clubs and individuals.

Since last October the province was an added $255,017 to 39 groups working with various aspects of problems relating to the non-medical use of drugs and alcoholism.

District Aims Study Slated

A citizens' committee to examine the industrial and commercial development needs of Saanich is expected to hold its first meeting within three weeks.

The ad hoc group created at the suggestion of Mayor Hugh Curtis in his inaugural speech in January, will select its chairman from among seven persons representing the community.

They will have the technical assistance of the municipal planning department, which has drafted a set of proposed terms of reference.

Planner Tom Loney said it was co-incidental that the department had just launched a commercial-industrial study of Saanich and he expected the new committee will be "a great assistance to our study."

Curtis said the committee would determine its own approach to problems and set a timetable for completing the study, which will look into general commercial and light industrial or service requirements and locations.

The object is to co-ordinate such development with other forms of zoning and land use in the municipality and to broaden the property tax base.

One of the areas to be examined could be the way industry is shifting away from traditional concepts which in some cases have confined the choice of locations.

In any event, it was thought deliberations would all be done in a regional context.

Existing commercial and developed land in the municipality likely will be broken down into particular useages and examined with vacant land or potentially commercial-industrial land.

Among the members are Saanich Advisory Planning Commission chairman Gordon Denford, architect Alan Lester and Saanich coundil planning committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring. The planning commission is entitled to one more member and the Saanich Chamber of Commerce may delegate three.

Shhhhhh... Entering Saanich

A general ban on nuisance noise by people, vehicles and farm, domestic and wild animals is proposed in the draft form of the first Saanich noise suppression bylaw.

The subject of noise control has been under discussion for more than a year and was brought to a head last fall as study was made of other jurisdictions and proposals were made within Saanich.

Aldermen have been given the draft bylaw for study prior to further consideration by council's legislative committee this month.

Some aspects of the bylaw are already covered in existing legislation, for example, the municipal Animals Bylaw, the B.C. Motor Vehicles Act and the Criminal Code.

The new bylaw brings them under one legislative umbrella, making enforcement easier and providing for uniform penalties.

Proposed penalties upon conviction for noise-making in Saanich range from $25 to $300 for a first offence and $50 to $500 for second and subsequent offences.

Each day of an alleged violation constitutes an offence under the proposal.

The proliferation of noise was cited by Mayor Hugh Curtis in his opening speech this year, which said:

"Without interfering with reasonable individual rights, the trend toward noisier environment must be reversed."

Notice of the intention to introduce such a law was supported by the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society last year.

Unlike some pollution control laws there are no technical criteria written in, although these could be added later. They might include such factors as decibel measurement of noise within a prescribed range and distance from source.

The bylaw declares no person may shout, use a megaphone or make other noise in or on a street, wharf, dock, steamboat-landing, railway station or other public place "which disturbs or tends to disturb the quiet, peace, rest, enjoyment, comfort or convenience of the neighborhood or of persons in the vincinity thereof."

There is a long list of suggested exceptions, including police, fire and ambulance warnings; marching bands in authorized parades; reasonable use of amplifier systems for voice or music in parks and squares for public gatherings; warnings by vehicles, boats and trains to avert danger, and church bells and chimes.

There is also provision to exclude the erection or demolition of buildings between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m., except Sunday or in an emergency, or other essential work of an emergency nature where the health, safety and welfare of the community may be at stake.

Welfare Cost Split Unchanged: WAC

There will be no reduction in the share of welfare costs paid by British Columbia's municipalities, Premier Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett made the statement after Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said earlier that he was "forcibly and actively" considering such a reduction.

Upon his return to Victoria Thursday afternoon after a week in Kelowna and Vancouver, the Premier firmly squashed the idea of a reduction when asked about Gaglardi's statements by reporters.

"The answer is no," Bennett said quickly.

He added that "I don't want to mislead anybody" into thinking such a reduction is possible.

Gaglardi made his statement about a possible reduction of the 13 per cent municipal share following a flood of letters from the province's mayors.

Socred MLA Alex Fraser started the letter campaign and predicted Thursday the government would act on the matter within 30 days.

Landfill Effluent Stopped

A spokesman said today the Pollution Control Branch is satisified effluent running into Millstream Creek from a Langford landfill operation has been stopped.

A complaint about a month ago claimed Millstream Landfill, which dumps wood waste and construction refuse at 2015 Millstream, was producing a pollution problem in the creek.

The firm operates under a permit from the Pollution Control Branch. James McCrossan of the branch said the situation has been examined and the provincial agency is satisfied the problem has been remedied.

NONSUCH SAILS AGAIN

Like a stately ghost from the past, the full-size replica of the 54-foot ketch Nonsuch, the ship whose 17th century fur-trading voyage gave birth to the Hudson's Bay Co., will sail into the Inner Harbor a week today.

She is expected to tie up at 10:30 a.m. and will be in Victoria until May 29.

On hand for her arrival will be George Richardson, governor of the company; Mrs. Richardson and Lord Amory, former company governor.

During her time alongside, the Nonsuch will be open to the public each evening from 7 to 9 p.m. and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

★ ★ ★

Built over a 10-month period in a Devonshire shipyard, the replica is a faithful re-incarnation of the ship whose 1668-1669 voyage opened up the fur trade of western Canada.

Her hull is of solid English oak and her 37-foot keel, elm. Isle of Wight artist Jack Whitehead painstakingly carved her lion masks, two life-sized crouching dogs and the magnificent carvings on her stern — two small cupids focussed in a setting of foliage and female figures.

Her 2,000 square feet of canvas sails, like her predecessor's, have hand-sewen eyelets and are operated by miles of hemp rope.

Her cramped crew quarters bear witness to the spartan life of 17th century sailors.

★ ★ ★

Built at a cost of $175,000 to mark The Bay's 300th anniversary, the Nonsuch replica arrived in Canada in April, 1970, having crossed the Atlantic on the deck of the SS Bristol City.

After crossing Canada by flatcar, she was refitted in Seattle this winter.

She will spend the summer visiting ports on this coast.

Summer over, she will be taken overland again to her final 'homeport' in Winnipeg, where she will be exhibited, all sails flying, at the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

Ask the Times

Q. Could you give me some facts on the Skeena Prince and the Island Prince owned by the Northland Navigation Co.? I would like to know when they were built, their gross tonnage and their former names.—D.W.

A. The Skeena Prince was built in Vancouver in 1946 and has a gross tonnage of 1,439 tons. She was originally named the Blue Peter II; later, when owned by Union Steamships, she was called the Cassiar. The Island Prince was built in Norway in 1958 and has a gross tonnage of 1,291 tons. Her former name was the Hugh Arianne.

River Trip for Canoeists

Beauties of the San Juan River will be savored by members of the Victoria Canoe Club this weekend.

They'll be gathering at the B.C. Forest's camp site on Fairy Lake at 10 a.m. Saturday for the downriver trip of exploration. Stan Luzzi will be trip leader. He can be reached at 478-7262.

On Sunday, Bob Tippett will be in charge of a trip to the nearby botanical gardens with tides dictating an early start. Bob's number is 598-3466.

Keel boats of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be racing their first over-nighter of the season this weekend.

Start time is set for 5 p.m. Saturday off Gonzales Point.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

This is a 48-mile race with the outward mark being Crescent Rock on the American side of the Strait.

The finish line will be between Trial Island and Harling Point.

Canoe Bay Sailing Club has another race planned for this weekend. Beginning at 9:30 a.m. Sunday off the government wharf at Sidney, the boats will race 14-miles with Sidney Island as a mark of the course.

It was an evening of frustration Tuesday for boats of the Turkey Head Sailing Association, racing, if that is the term, off Oak Bay Marina.

With practically non-existent wind to fight an adverse tide only four of the 17-boat fleet were able to complete the course in the time limit.

Of those that finished, Gordie Vickery's Valhalla was over-all winner, beating out Nigel Scott-Moncrieff's Tatoosh, Gerry Porter's Aureola and Stan Cosburn's Wild Thing. There'll be another race Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Wednesday night sailors at Royal Vic. had better luck wind-wise.

In Cal 20s, it was Mike Fraser's Windless in top spot, followed by Ken Kidd's Por Gusto and A. J. MacGregor's Ookpik.

John Nelson's Kaya won in Crown 23 competition with Hugh Porters' Errigal placing second.

First Thunderbird home was Bob Grundison's Owl. Finishing after her were Ian Stewart's Ahoo-Ya, Dave Anstey's Hussy II and Ed Cushings' Shamrock.

Steve Merriman's Vandal beat out four boats in the IRO class.

In dinghy racing Tony Rose won in OKs, Doug Taylor Lee in Fireballs and Mike Williams in El Toros. Dave Pickles was runner-up El Toro skipper.

SCORING THREAT Danny Lomas is slated for action Saturday with Victoria West-United in match against Vancouver's Paul's Canadians that will decide Pacific Coast Soccer League playoff title. It was goal by Lomas last weekend that gave United 1-0 victory over Canadians in opening game of two-game, total-goal final. Saturday's match starts at 2 p.m. and will be played at Centennial Stadium. It was announced erroneously Thursday that the contest would be at Royal Athletic Park.

BURWASH QUITS IN HUFF

VANCOUVER (CP) — Davis Cup action gets under way at Jericho Tennis Club today (at 12:30 p.m. PDT with Canadians Mike Belkin of Montreal and Tony Bardsley of Vancouver pitted against Mexico's Joaquin Loyo-Mayo and Paul Ramirez.

The opening of the three days of Davis Cup play, the first in Vancouver for seven years, was marred Thursday by the defection of Peter Burwash of Toronto from the Canadian team.

Burwash, ranked number one in Canada, left the team in a huff, saying that he "didn't feel part of the team."

Playing captain Belkin had chosen Bardsley over Burwash to play against the Mexicans in singles matches. However, Burwash could have played in the doubles Saturday, when the players can be named up to an hour before the match.

Belkin, 26, is considered Canada's genuine hope in the tie. He won both his singles matches in last year's Davis Cup play in Mexico.

Bardsley, a 27-year-old teaching pro, will take on Loyo-Mayo in singles play Sunday, and Belkin will meet Ramirez in the final match.

Dale Power of Toronto is the remaining member of the Canadian team and eligible for doubles play Saturday.

Bakers Squander Big Lead; Struggle to Edge Surrey

Victoria MacDonald's Bread players stopped running after fashioning a big lead Thursday night at Memorial Arena and then had to stage a struggle for survival before taking a 12-10 Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League decision over Surrey Junior Salmonbellies.

Trailing 8-1 during the second period and appearing doomed for disaster, Surrey surged back and pulled within one goal, at 11-10, with about three minutes remaining.

Kevin Alexander bailed the Bakers out of big trouble by firing his second goal of the night at 17:47 as he drilled a low show behind the Surrey netminder.

Alexander had scored eight goals Monday as the Bakers downed the Salmonbellies 14-9 in Surrey after dropping their home opener 9-7 last Saturday to league-champion Burnaby Cablevision.

Jim Lynch scored four goals and set up five others to spark the Victoria attack. Linemate Glen Newman collected three goals. Danny Green and Alexander scored twice each and Pete Gibson tallied once for the winners.

Coach Bill Munroe, apparently convinced that his Bakers had wrapped up the game, replaced goalie John Hamilton with backup man Bill Robertson when the count had reached 8-1.

"We have third-period letdowns and we stop running," said Munroe after the game.

When Surrey scored its ninth goal, Hamilton came back in but was promptly beaten on the next Salmonbelly shot, setting the stage for Alexander's clinching tally.

Dary McColl scored three times for Surrey and Phil Ashbee and Glen Bourassa scored two goals each. Scott Guy, Walt Weaver and Chuck Medhurts had Surrey's other goals.

Coquitlam outscored Richmond 18-14 in another game this week.

Players Hurt In Collision

Murray Sluggett rapped three singles and drove in four runs Thursday night as Butler Brothers battered Churchill Hotel 11-3 in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

Ken Fox pitched a four-hitter, going the distance for the victory that boosted Butlers into a second-place tie with Nanaimo.

Victory was costly as shortstop Frank Cooper and leftfielder Joe Underwood were both taken to hospital after colliding in the outfield while chasing a fly ball.

Underwood was treated for lacerations and released and X-rays revealed a jaw fracture for Cooper.

Ottawa Moves to Stop Farmers Bilking Gov't

Canadian Press

Changes in the government's $40-million program to encourage farmers to switch grainland into forage were announced Thursday in an attempt to keep farmers from bilking the government.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said in a news release that some farmers have used the program to seed land to forage, collect an initial $5-an-acre payment, then put the acreage back into grain production.

From now on, he said, the government will pay farmers only one $10-an-acre payment, rather than two $5 ones, after farms have been checked by government inspectors.

The program was introduced last year to encourage farmers to seed land to forage that had originally been used for grain. The idea was to increase the amount of livestock feed and reduce carry-over grain surpluses from previous years.

Farmers had to switch 25 acres to forage to qualify for grants. The first $5-an-acre payment was made when farmers seeded forage crops, the second was to be made the following year after the crops had matured.

Farmers no longer will have to divert a minimum 25 acres to qualify for the grants, Mr. Olson said. And a regulation that required farmers to deduct land taken from forage and put into grain also is dropped.

Inspections to see whether farmers are maintaining forage crops will be carried out this summer and fall, in 1973 and 1974.

The program is to apply until four million acres have been switched to forage from grain crops or until the end of 1974. To date, about 25,000 farmers have applied under the program for a total of about two million acres.

Power Rate Change

REGINA (CP) — A rate-change affecting 66,000 farm customers was announced Thursday by the Saskatchewan Power Corp.

Agriculture Minister Jack Messer, minister in charge of the power corporation, said in a prepared statement the change consolidates 15 different classifications into two. He said the new rates will mean little or no change in the total annual bill for about 35,000 farms. About 2,500 will experience a reduction of $2 or more a month, 20,700 will experience a reduction of between $1 and $2 and about 9,000 will pay about $2 a month more.

Firm Bankrupt

WINNIPEG (CP) — M.P. Industrial Mills Thursday became the fourth firm involved in the $92 million integrated forestry development at The Pas to be declared bankrupt.

Mr. Justice Israel Nitikman ruled in Court of Queen's Bench the firm was insolvent and had committed an act of bankruptcy by not being able to meet its liabilities. The three other firms in the Northern Manitoba project, Churchill Forest Industries (Manitoba) Ltd., River Sawmills and James Bertram and Son (Canada) Ltd., were declared bankrupt earlier.

Fewer Districts

EDMONTON (CP) — A report tabled in the legislature Wednesday recommends that the number of school districts in the province be reduced to 20 from 139.

An abstract of the report — by E. A. Holdaway, a member of the faculty of education at the University of Alberta — was tabled by Education Minister Lou Hyndman. It is based on a study into non-instructional positions, functions and costs in provincial school jurisdictions.

$10 MARIJUANA SALE BRINGS PRISON TERM

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 22-year-old Winnipeg man who sold one ounce of marijuana to an RCMP officer for $10 was sentenced Thursday to 2½ years in penitentiary.

Gordon Wagner, convicted by an Assize Court jury two weeks ago, received the sentence in Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench from Mr. Justice James E. Wilson.

Crown Attorney Hersh Wolch said the offense was a serious one, carrying a maximum sentence of life imprisonment. He said he was not asking for life imprisonment, but felt more than a moderate sentence was needed.

Defence Counsel Dave Margolis said there was evidence the RCMP officer had made attempts to induce Wagner to sell him the marijuana. In spite of his criminal record, a light sentence would be adequate, he said.

Liberals Not Facing Facts In Budget, NDP Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal governments, like ancient monarchs, kill the messenger rather than accept the bad news, says Max Saltsman, New Democrat financial critic.

He told the Commons Thursday this is the attitude that leads Liberals to offer all kinds of excuses but never to face up to such facts as unemployment that has run about six per cent of the labor force for a year.

In the first day of full debate on Monday's budget, Mr. Saltsman said a recent assessment by Statistics Canada showed there had been no appreciable change in redistribution of income between the various levels of Canadian society between 1957 and 1967. This was despite all the vaunted programs on the subject produced by Conservative and Liberal governments in those 10 years.

He said Robert Kaplan (L—Toronto Don Valley), chairman of the finance committee, raised the issue when Statistics Canada officials were before the committee and was dissatisfied with the information.

Mr. Saltsman quoted Mr. Kaplan as saying that if true, it constituted "one of the most serious allegations" against government he had ever seen.

READS FROM RECORD

Reading from the committee record, he quoted Mr. Kaplan as saying; "I think it is very important for the credibility of Parliament . . . that there has been movement."

Mr. Saltsman said this was one of "the most pathetic statements made by a young man in search of justification for his policies."

When he couldn't stand the hard news, he blamed those gathering the statistics.

His speech set the tone for a day of criticism of government tax and spending programs for the year.

Marcel Lambert, Conservative financial critic, called the budget a hit-and-miss effort that took money away with one hand, gave it back with another, but still treated the country as a "whole forest of money trees" that could be harvested without limit.

Main thrust of the budget was a reduction in corporation income taxes in an effort to stimulate job-creating industrial expansion and increases in pensions for the elderly and disabled war veterans and their dependants.

The budget debate, which can go a maximum six days, provides a chance for motions of non-confidence in government policies.

MOVED MOTION

Conservatives and New Democrats quickly took the opportunity. Mr. Lambert moved one saying the government had failed to bring in adequate measures to relieve unemployment, provide incentives for Canadians to invest in their own economy and to provide personal income tax relief as an economic stimulant.

Mr. Saltsman added a subamendment saying the government should have reduced taxes for middle- and lower-income groups to replace the cuts given corporations.

Both criticized the government for not adopting a real industrial strategy.

Both also noted that the new tax bill, brought in late last year and applying for the first time this year, is going to produce about $1.2 billion more from direct taxation of individuals.

SALTSMAN
. . . sets tone

With direct corporate taxes being reduced by $60 million at the same time, Mr. Saltsman said, and with the bulk of Canada's industrial sector owned by foreigners, this amounted to the wage and salary earners of the country being forced to pay a fantastic subsidy that would benefit foreigners.

AMOUNTS TO BRIBE

This amounted to a straight bribe in an attempt to keep U.S.-owned subsidiaries in Canada from fleeing back across the border to take advantage of recent tax legislation giving breaks to U.S. corporations that sell abroad, Mr. Saltsman said.

Faced with the need to establish a policy on foreign ownership of Canadian industry, the Liberals had come up only with a policy "to bribe the hell out of them."

This wasn't the sort of policy a "self-respecting nation can live with."

Mr. Lambert said the budget speech of Finance Minister John Turner stressed that there were no tax changes for individuals. But, by default, the government was letting a three-per-cent reduction in personal income taxes, applying until the end of 1972, go by the boards.

This, coupled with the $1.2 billion increased collection in personal direct taxes, meant "it is monstrous" for the government to say personal taxes were not being touched.

NOT TRUE REFLECTION

Mr. Lambert said cost-of-living increases tied to pensions for the elderly and veterans don't truly reflect the price of inflation.

Because they are based on percentage increases in the consumer price index, and because each increase is taken from an ever-higher base figure, they do not meet actual increases in prices, Mr. Lambert argued.

He also suggested there should have been more incentive in the budget for Canadians to invest in their own economy. Americans still had better tax breaks in going for takeovers or expansion in Canada than Canadians.

Real Caouette, Social Credit leader, wondered why the government had said two years ago that it couldn't afford increased pension benefits and introduced them now.

"How can it be possible when we have more unemployment and the economy is shakier than ever?"

Mr. Caouette said it was a real joke to reduce the corporation tax, giving money to the powerful and expecting them to create jobs. This wouldn't improve the purchasing power of taxpayers, a step that should have been taken to improve the economic situation.

Today the House continues study of the bill to increase the old age pensions. It returns to the budget debate Monday.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Hospital Drug Study

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal grant of $6,500 has been awarded to the College of Pharmacy of the University of Saskatchewan to carry out a unit-dose drug-distribution survey in Canada.

The survey will study changes in hospital costs, medication errors and utilization of personnel which occur when hospitals change from a random stocking of drugs to a system where pharmacists dispense all drug doses in a form ready to be administered by nurses.

Murder Charged To UMW Official

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI) — Albert W. Pass, 51, a member of the decision-making international exective board of the United Mine Workers, was charged with murder Thursday in the Yablonski slayings.

The short stocky lifelong employee of the UMW stood impassively as he was charged with three counts of murder in the Dec. 31, 1969 shooting deaths of UMW leader Joseph A. Yablonski, his wife and daughter in their home in nearby Clarksville, Pa.

Applicants Sought

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government has received several applications for the position of ombudsman but likely will advertise the job, Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

He told a news conference the man wanted for the $20,000-a-year job should have some background in law and government procedure.

Profiteering Suspected Among Hughes Aides

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An elite team of about 20 U.S. Internal Revenue Service investigators has been assembled in Las Vegas with orders to concentrate exclusively on the multi-million-dollar empire of Howard Hughes, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The agents and lawyers on the team, brought in from Washington, were warned they may be in Las Vegas for years, the newspaper said.

The investigators are not after Hughes, who is under no suspicion, the Times reported.

The IRS is investigating individuals who may have manipulated Hughes' funds from within his organization, the Times said.

"Investigators are acting on the suspicion that some individuals have juggled funds and holdings to enrich themselves . . . IRS interest in what ordinarily would be a (Hughes) Tool Co. internal concern stems from a belief that suspected profiteers paid insufficient or no income tax on misbegotten riches," the Times said.

Hughes is believed to have more than $250 million invested in Nevada. He is the state's biggest employer, with more than 8,000 persons on his payroll.

Taxes from his gambling operations alone provide 5 per cent of the state government's income.

The Times said the team is focusing particularly on the purchase of the Hughes organization of mines and mining claims. Hughes owns about 2,700 such claims.

IRS investigators were told the claims were purchased at prices far higher than their real value.

A former FBI man who became a troubleshooter for Hughes estimated last year that Hughes spent $18 million buying claims worth less than $100,000.

The Times quoted government sources as saying funds had been traced to "mysterious channels" that went overseas.

The Hughes organization itself has filed a $9 million suit in Salt Lake City, charging five individuals and five companies with conspiring to get Hughes to pay more for mining claims than they were worth. The individuals include John Meier, a former top Hughes aide.

NOW IT'S A JULY VOTE . . . THEY SAY

OTTAWA (CP) — There is speculation about a possible July 17 general election—just as there was about a June 27 general vote. It may well prove as badly based.

When Prime Minister Trudeau failed to call that widely-predicted June vote—he would have had to do it by about April 26—most politicians and pundits tended to talk about a fall election, probably in October.

But recently, and particularly in the light of last week's budget, MPs in all parties are talking about July 17. While summer elections are traditionally avoided, because of vacations, the new Canada Elections Act, with its broader provisions for advance polls, eliminates many of the objections.

At Wednesday's caucus meetings, apparently all parties discussed the possibilities of a July vote. Sources say the 17th was, by far, the most talked-about date.

But Mr. Trudeau, who alone makes the decision, wasn't tipping his hand.

The budget, with its increased benefits for pensioners and business, is generally regarded as a pre-election document. By the end of next week, when the budget debate is completed and the pension legislation enacted, the prime minister would have time to call a July 17 election.

By getting all-party agreement to interrupt the budget debate for the pension legislation, the government should have the increases in the hands of pensioners by the end of June.

Sources say the government has been bombarded with complaints about old age pensions, and the increase may serve to soothe the many ruffled feathers.

There still is a general view that Mr. Trudeau prefers to get the election out of the way as early as possible to avoid a non-stop semi-campaign until fall.

However, the same arguments were used about a June 26 election. And there is nothing to prevent the usual summer recess starting perhaps in late June, to be followed by an election call at Mr. Trudeau's choosing.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old Sooke Road youth who pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft offences last month while he was on parole was sentenced in provincial court Thursday to a year in prison.

Harvey Harold Heimbecker, of 2980 Sooke, pleaded guilty April 25 to two Colwood charges of breaking, entering and theft and one of attempted breaking and entering.

The thefts occurred Feb. 5 and 6 at Colwood firms, when a television set, cash and other items were taken.

A pre-sentence report showed the offences were drug-related, although Heimbecker said he had stopped using drugs a month ago when an overdose sent him to hospital.

Judge William Ostler said the accused had paid only lip service to terms of his parole from the Boulder Bay forestry camp detention centre last year.

Character witnesses called by defence lawyer Dermod Owen' Flood said Heimbecker was a member and one-time president of his church youth group at the time of the offences.

Larry Erwin Blake, 23, of no fixed address, was sentenced to one year in jail for theft and forgery.

Blake stole a credit card from his brother-in-law in Edmonton last month, then took a motorcycle, $85 in cash and a $148 cheque from friends with whom he was staying after his arrival in Victoria.

He used the card to buy clothing worth $32.44.

Gary James Streeton, 26, of 6050 Pat Bay, was fined $250 for possession of hashish at his home Wednesday.

Streeton said he had bought a quarter-gram of the drug for $2 at a downtown hotel.

Rocks Injure Ten At Wallace Rally

FREDERICK, Md. (UPI) — Ten persons were treated today for injuries after 75 black teen-agers lobbed rocks and bottles at Democratic presidential candidate Governor George Wallace. He was not hit by any of the objects.

About 100 state policemen in riot gear formed a cordon when he left the National Guard armory here Thursday night after a speech.

Mayor Paul Magaha clamped an 11 p.m. curfew on this western Maryland city after bands of blacks roamed through the downtown area after the Wallace rally. Two plate glass windows were broken. Police reported no arrests.

Do Mothers Really Have Their Day . . . ?

By COLMAN McCARTHY
Special to the Times

It is still possible to find women who rest happily in the arms of motherhood, but it takes a hard and long look.

Before you reach them, there are the countless mothers who restlessly yearn to hold a job, as though doing the work of the organization is automatically more fulfilling than the work of the home.

Others are forced into jobs, like it or not.

There are the many mothers who remember themselves at 22, with a college degree and a talent in music, or writing or art; and now, at 44, half a life later, have used little of their education and none of the talent.

Other mothers, whose first 10 years of marriage were filled with ardor, now experience nothing but dryness in the second 10 years.

Some mothers enjoyed the challenge of caring for infants but now they are staggered by being the mothers of teen-agers.

In sum, it may be Mother's Day Sunday, but doubtless many mothers would be as happy not being reminded.

How has this confusion happened?

If a woman chooses marriage and bears children, she will be lucky to select a man who does not end up a Thomas Wolfe, prowling and raging through the house because he has no time for his manhood and couldn't care less about fatherhood.

Few men and women marry because they have a passion for raising children; if that's the case, they will stay celibate and go into pediatrics or the pre-school industry.

Mothers by Accident

Women have always become mothers more by accident and convention than choice What is new, depressingly so for many mothers, is that little emotional or social support is available anymore once a mother realizes her fix. Her husband, children and home are persistent landlords of her soul, demanding higher and higher emotional rents which she has no way of paying.

The women's liberation movement is unjustly blamed for agitating women, the way racists in the 1960s asked to what end the civil rights movement was stirring up the blacks. Thanks to the best feminine minds of the movement, many women are now rejecting motherhood and marriage before, rather than after, a commitment is made. Essentially, the movement reaffirms Jung's belief: "The fact that mothers bear children is not holy but merely natural. If people say it is holy, then one strongly suspects that something very unholy has to be covered up by it."

Where women's liberation is weak is in not supplying goals that women are supposedly being liberated for — as if the satisfactions of mothering are easily replaced.

Actually, many mothers in other cultures, such as the Latin-American ones, are busy activists who remain at home because that's where the power is. In a valuable book, Social Character in a Mexican Village (Prentice Hall), psychoanalysts Erich Fromm and Michael McCoby write that "in appearance Mexico is a strict father-centred society. In law and custom the man rules. Women are looked on as inferior and weaker.

"But it is also evident that interwoven with this patriarchal structure is a matriarchal system. In the family system the main figure of attachment, regardless of the individual's age, is his mother . . . to hurt or offend the mother is perhaps the most real and severe crime, although not in legal terms nor even in terms of what villagers consciously think about crime . . .

Women's Lib Calls

When women's liberation calls for mothers to be allowed their chance for realism and responsibility, it is ironic that the mother in a Mexican village has achieved it in a way that many mothers in upper middle class neighborhoods have not. A possible conclusion would suggest that it is not the institution of motherhood that makes mothers passive, but other institutions.

The fashion industry, for example, tells mother not to make or design her own clothes, but to wait until some dollar-minded Frenchman comes out with his spring styles and then buy those.

The women's magazines — notably Cosmopolitan — con women into believing obedience to the male is the way to win and keep him, forgetting that the male may have no masculinity left because he is too hassled obeying a boss, who must obey a board chairman, who must obey the stockholders.

Mothers have always been hurt by their own yearnings, but lately too many pressures are trying to rub the pain in all the way.

Children sometimes grow to age 18 spending more time listening to the television than to their mother; how can child-raising be satisfying against that?

Fathers are in trouble because they have no models — neither in their own fathers, nor in fatherly political leaders.

Most people are defined by what they work at, but the work of motherhood is not what you do today but what your child or husband becomes tomorrow. Until then, what are you?

Sunday will be mother's "special" day in the Rompain household

—John McKay photo

. . . Mary Anne Says She Does

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Mrs. Mary Anne Rompain has several good reasons for celebrating Mother's Day this Sunday.

This former school teacher is now the mother of six children, ranging from one to 11 years of age.

When Mrs. Rompain and her husband, Earl, married 16 years ago, they decided a family of six children, born two years apart, would be perfect. Their four daughters and two sons arrived as planned.

Rompain, also a teacher, has taken a leave of absence to try commercial fishing.

He brought the family from Alberta last October to find out "if all the wonderful things we hear about B.C. are true."

Mrs. Rompain says her husband bought a boat and spent the winter learning how to operate it. His previous experience with boats had all been gained "on the ferry coming to the island."

For Mrs. Rompain, "happiness is having the whole family well." She enjoys being a mother and thinks her role is challenging but rewarding. She definitely doesn't agree with women who submerge their identity in the role of mother.

"Raising children is the greatest job women are given and, to do it properly, mothers have to cultivate their own minds and personalities," she said.

Mrs. Rompain is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and finds time to teach a primary class at the church once a week.

She thinks of herself as a "domestic executive" and has never considered herself just a housewife.

"Women have to maintain their own interests in order to give their children a rewarding life," she said. "Education should be continuous — even for mothers."

Mrs. Rompain says the church gives her moral support and the authority to make and enforce decisions. Without religion, she "wouldn't know where to begin" raising children.

Baby Alarm

Mrs. Rompain's day starts at 7 a.m., with the baby serving as alarm clock. "I don't work fast — I just work long," she says.

She finds early morning the best time to give each child a bit of attention.

"The first one up gets a little more of my time," she said.

Each child has a special day once a week. On his day, the child asks the blessing at meals and doesn't have to do daily chores. He also is allowed to choose television programs and family activities.

The Rompains also hold Family Home Evening, a program developed by their church, one evening a week. They arrange special outings — last week they went to the circus — or discuss topics of interest to all.

One week they discussed allowances. Another evening was spent on vocabulary. The children helped choose a lot of "garbage words" to be thrown out and never used by the family. Often they put on a play or puppet show or listen to music. The evening lasts until the children are tired.

"I think my children will remember these evenings all their lives," Mrs. Rompain said.

Mrs. Rompain thinks mothers should only work when it is a financial necessity, although she admits some women make better mothers if they go out to work.

"There are a lot of women who feel trapped by the house wife syndrome," she said. "If these mothers can't find enough involvement in their homes, they should try volunteer work or take a job."

Mrs. Rompain thinks all mothers need a break from the constant company of very young children.

Get Away

"You have to get away from small children once in a while or you begin to sink down to their level," she said.

In her opinion young wives should work for a few years before they have children to get to know their husbands and so "they won't feel they are missing a career."

She believes mothers should stay at home as long as they are needed. Mrs. Rompain pointed out that children also want to feel they are needed.

"Children have to feel needed and be able to see their accomplishments," she said.

Mrs. Rompain doesn't know what her children are planning for Mother's day. Last year they gave her shrubs for the garden and each child sang a special song in her honor.

"It's one day mothers feel a little more important," Mrs. Rompain said.

A LOOK AT HOME

Home needn't be a ticky tacky box.

Around Victoria, many people have come up with novel solutions to the task of finding a place to live, combining comfort with a "touch of something different."

Times photographer John McKay and reporter David May went out in search of such homes with eye-appeal and individuality. Their selection of homes and the comments of their owners appear in a Family Section picture story today on Page 23.

Science Probes Beef's Tenderness

OTTAWA (CP) — "How tender is the beef?" used to be a question that could only be answered satisfactorily with knife and fork at the dinner table. But scientists now are coming to the aid of the harried shopper.

Scientists at the National Research Council have developed a grading method that will permit the meat industry to identify the tender from the tough.

Even the best quality meat can lack uniformity in tenderness, says an article in the council's journal, Science Dimension.

Two steers from the same herd, raised under similar conditions, slaughtered at the same time, processed in the same way, graded similarly and aged under identical conditions still might show vast differences in tenderness in resulting steaks.

Dr. A. W. Khan, who has been working on the problem for two years at the council's Ottawa laboratories, has found that carcasses can be graded for tenderness by using a device that measures acidity in the meat. This is done immediately after the animal has been slaughtered.

Meat from carcasses having set acid ratings will be tender and require only four-to-six days of aging to achieve maximum tenderness, he said.

Meat carcasses having lower acid content will be less tender. The tough meat can be aged for a longer period, which helps tenderize it.

Standard practice for obtaining maximum tenderness now is to age all meat for about two weeks at temperatures just above freezing, the article says.

Using the method established by Dr. Khan, meats with high acid readings — the more tender ones — could be aged for shorter periods.

This means there would be less chance of spoilage and less weight loss through evaporation during the aging, he said. Storage and refrigeration costs to the industry also could be cut.

Arthritis Cure Still Distant

Following is the last of three articles on the crippling and painful disease, arthritis, which afflicts far more women than men.

By NANCY B. CLARKE
Special to the Times

How long will it be before scientists find the answer to arthritis?

Nobody knows.

Regarding rheumatoid arthritis, the crippler and worst form of the disease, Dr. Joseph L. Hollander, chief of the arthritis section of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, said:

"We've made big progress in the last seven or eight years in understanding the mechanism of the disease — how it behaves. Still we don't know what triggers it."

The newest theory, that the initiator is a latent virus, is "persuasive but not convincing," said Dr. Hollander. "If a virus can be found, a vaccine may be possible."

Still Looking

Dr. Hollander pointed out that medical science now has more potent ways of coping with rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis, but is not on the verge of a breakthrough with either of them.

"We're looking for a preventive vaccine as well as a cure," he said.

Osteoarthritis, milder than rheumatoid, is the kind of arthritis most people get. An estimated 40.5 million people have it, ten million of them seriously enough to cause painful problems. It is seldom disabling.

New Drugs

Among the newest drugs being used to treat rheumatoid arthritis are the anti-cancer (anti-inflammatory) drugs, Dr. Hollander said. He said there have been successes with them but "they are dangerous and still experimental."

Meanwhile, coping with the painful, often crippling chronic arthritis, in all of its 80 some forms, are those who have it and the doctors who treat them — the rheumatologists (specialists in arthritis and rheumatic diseases) and the thousands of general practitioners and internists.

Dr. George Ehrlich, founder and director of the large arthritis center of Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia, says arthritics and others with long-term, chronic diseases sometimes don't get the kind of support they need from their doctors, he said.

"Doctors today are taught to be crisis-oriented," he said.

"In acute situations, the doctor can afford to concentrate on the illness and neglect the person who has it because he has the means of remedying it.

"In chronic illness, the doctor has to be much more aware of the person who harbors the illness because the illness by definition stays with the patient for long periods, perhaps for life, and causes alterations in the way a person adjusts to his environment.

"Doctors need a more personalized sympathetic approach to chronic illness."

Quack Cures

Dr. Ehrlich believes that doctors who don't know enough about arthritis and those who don't spend sufficient time with their arthritic patients contribute to the popularity of quack cures for arthritis.

"A patient doesn't see much around to see what else he can try," Dr. Ehrlich said. "The thing works like a stock tip."

What he hears about are vibrators, magnetic rings, diets, "immunized milk" and copper bracelets.

The copper bracelet, some selling for more than $7, is one of the most popular quack cures of the moment.

Not Absorbed

"Metallic copper is not absorbed through the skin," said Dr. William E. Reynolds, former medical director of the National Arthritis Foundation, in a recent article, "and therefore can have no internal effect."

Quack cures and remedies catch on because of the mysterious nature of arthritis. Arthritics have intermittent joint pain and often go into remissions. When remission happens, the symptoms seem to disappear.

The arthritis quackery racket robs the arthritic of $403 million annually, according to foundation literature, many millions of dollars more than the combined annual budgets of the U.S. government, the Arthritis Foundation and its chapters.

The combined public and private money going for research training and other aspects to conquer the disease that afflicts more women than men is around $15 million a year, according to Charles B. Harding, chairman of the board of the National Arthritis Foundation.

Last fiscal year, the U.S. federal contribution to that was a little over $12 million.

The emotional impact on a wife and mother with a crippling case of rheumatoid arthritis who can no longer take care of her household as she once did is not fully understood by society or her family, Dr. Ehrlich pointed out.

Some disabling arthritis, especially osteoarthritis of the hip, affects a person's sex life, said Dr. Ehrlich, but both the doctor and the patient are embarrassed to talk about it and little research has been done.

Sex Possible

"There are variations of position that can be used," he said, "Neither partner need be deprived in many cases."

Dr. Ehrlich believes that more hospitals in this country should develop a professional inter-disciplinary approach to those with disabling chronic diseases — a team that includes pshychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, and physical therapists as well as attending physicians.

'Not All Additives Villains'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Food additives have had a bad press lately. But not all of them are villains, says G. O. Kermode:

"If food production is to increase enough to keep pace with population growth and the effort to improve nutrition generally in undernourished areas, chemicals that are not normally part of food will inevitably play an increasingly important role."

From the beginning of recorded history, men have been adding non-food substances to their food to make it more appetizing and easier to preserve. But since the 19th century food additives have multiplied until now they may number as many as 2,500.

How many of them are necessary or useful, how many of them are safe?

Tinkering with Food

Kermode, a Briton, is head of the food standards program operated jointly by the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization and World Health Organization. He discussed man's tinkering with food in a recent issue of Scientific American.

Additives are used for such purposes as enhancing flavor, improving color, preserving freshness, and protecting nutritional value. Every time a new additive is proposed, it must be examined from the standpoint of need and safety. Sometimes a once accepted additive is ruled out on the basis of new evidence, as in the case of cyclamate sweeteners in the United States.

But how can all additives in a list of 2,500, some dating back to ancient times, be evaluated? Tests to obtain approval of a single new additive can cost more than $100,000.

Additives fall generally in five categories: flavors, colors, preservatives, texture agencies such as thickeners, and miscellaneous — everything from materials to maintain moisture to others to maintain crispness.

Flavors Hard to Regulate

Flavors are the largest category — 1,100 to 1,400 of them. Insufficient information on their possibly poisonous or disease-causing aspects make flavors among the hardest of all additives to regulate.

"Evaluating them all for safety would be an immense task," according to Kermode. And there may be greater need to investigate "the safety of more important and potentially more dangerous additives."

Considering the cost of investigating a possibly harmful additive, governments and the food industry must hope for a greater international exchange of toxicological data, according to Kermode.

He noted that different nations have different rules. Take colors. The British will have a special problem when they become a fully fledged member of the European Economic Community: "Kippers will no longer be golden and sausages will no longer be 'nicely pink' unless the Community's list of permitted colors is extended."

New Drugs Confuse Doctors

GENEVA (Reuter) — Insistent public demand for "miracle drugs" and "magic cures" drives some doctors to prescribe unnecessary pills for trivial illnesses, the World Health Organization says.

Doctors are finding it more and more difficult to keep up to date with the new drugs which now appear on the market and to decide which are safe and effective.

The World Health Organization suggests that some simple ways should be found to supply physicians with up-to-date information on drug developments in different countries to keep them abreast of modern therapy methods.

In a paper prepared for the world health assembly here, WHO says the pharmaceutical revolution of the last few decades has created unprecedented capacity both to help and to harm.

Doctors prescribing drugs are faced with the problem of choosing from a wide range of new and old products and of assessing a wealth of information from biased as well as unbiased sources.

"The insistent demand of the public to take medicines for every ailment undoubtedly contributes to drug misuse and abuse," the report said.

"Expectation of miracle drugs and magical cures have been partly responsible for the defensive attitude of some physicians, who, instead of concentrating only on the well-being of the patient and on rational therapy, especially in trivial conditions, prescribe unnecessary active drugs."

'Little Boxes' They're Not...

Photographer John McKay and reporter David May went in search of unusual solutions to the 'housing question.' Right, the Hallihan family went Oriental. Left, a water tower awaits occupants.

When Umberto Trentin bought a plot of land seven years ago, he was surprised to find a landing craft sitting on his property. No one had told him that a beached boat was part of the deal.

Trentin's first reaction was one of alarm: "I thought I would put a match to it," he said.

But a friend, looking for accommodation, suggested the boat would make a good place to live. Trentin supplied materials, the friend the labor, and the dry-land boat at the corner of MacKenzie and Blenkinsop was spared the flames.

The boat's current tenant, Tony Funk, moved in about 15 months ago. He was attracted by the novelty of such a home setting — and its reasonable rent. He has repainted and redecorated the boat's interior, making it into a very acceptable bachelor "apartment" which he shares with Gordon Schneider, a salesman like himself.

The landlocked vessel is just one of the many distinctive housing solutions found by Victorians in their search for the perfect home.

The boat's visitors enter aft, by what was once the boat's engine room, now converted into a lounge area. Then it's downstairs and into the galley and dining room. Off the narrow corridor that leads the full length of the 65-foot vessel are the bathroom and two bedrooms.

Boat's Rent Kept Down

Today, landlord Trentin looks more favorably upon his "surprise." He could ask for more rent but he chooses to keep it down.

"If you put rents up, you're just encouraging people to quit and move away. I prefer to have happy tenants who stay," he said.

Happiness is the first thing to greet you at the Japanese-style home on Goldstream Avenue.

"The Oriental characters on the front gate mean health and happiness," says Irish-born Mike Hallihan, owner of the house, built in the 30s.

The house gives the impression of massive solidity; its walls are eight inches thick, it sits on solid rock foundation, and its roofbeams are of lumber specially cut for it at the old Colwood lumber yard, destroyed by fire in the late 30s. A heavy iron fence separates the front garden from the street.

Hallihan, who works with the provincial public works department, bought the house seven years ago for his wife and six children. The purchase he says, was in cash, with the transfer done by a notary public friend.

"That way, I didn't have to put out expensive lawyer's fees," Hallihan explained.

The Hallihans are becoming used to people taking photographs and asking questions about their Oriental-style home. The building once housed a museum and, at one time, residents were known to have served teas on the front lawn.

Today, however, the Hallihans' home is strictly their own private castle.

The Barn, tucked away in the Highland Lake district, also has its links with the East. In pre-First World War days, it served as quarters for a Chinese domestic servant. Today, John Thomson and his wife Prue live in the same building, but that obscure Chinese would be at a loss to recognize his former home.

In 1959, Thomson, then in his early 20s, helped his uncle renovate the old wooden building. A concrete floor was laid and draught holes were plugged.

On the ground floor are the living, dining, cooking and work areas. (Prue Thomson is a fashion model and designer and her husband a photographer, with a fascination for electronics. A work area is a necessity in the Thomson household.)

The focal point of the ground floor is the big open fire, a feature the Thomsons consider vital to any home. In winter, that fire has a lot of work to do; temperatures really drop in the Highland Lake district.

"Last winter we were without water for a month," says Thomson. "But I went out with a bucket, broke a hole in Maltby Lake and carried it in each day."

The Barn's character is the product of its many tenants and friends. Thomson's grandmother, Suzie Pemberton, a well-known wood carver, made a huge high-backed bench seat, a carved cabinet and a table. Windows from the old Oak Bay municipal hall were installed by one of Thomson's uncles in the 50s. The Thomsons, themselves, have added rugs, pottery and leather stools from a trip to North Africa. All these elements blend harmoniously with the Barn's wood and brick textures.

Do a Barn Yourself

If you're interested in "doing a Barn" yourself, you could well find the basic shell for your aspirations on the corner of Sinclair and Caro.

Located on University of Victoria property is a wooden building, once a water tower and stable, but currently lying unused. UVic's development office manager Floyd Fairclough said a move on campus to have the building recognized as being of historic interest resulted in a new roof and windows and doors being secured against vandalism.

That was two years ago. To the best of Fairclough's knowledge, UVic has no plans for the building, but he did suggest anyone interested in purchasing the building apply to UVic's president, Dr. Hugh Farquhar.

But, before you go rushing off to place your offer for one deserted water tower, circa 1912, be warned. You would have to prove your intentions were historically honorable, and you would have to be prepared to transport the tower to your own site. UVic will not part with the land that the tower is sitting on. Fairclough declined to speculate on what the going price for towers is these days.

Clinics Vital In Treating Hemophilia

OTTAWA (CP) — Hemophilia sufferers are among those victims of rare diseases for whom treatment in clinics provides much-needed security for both patients and their families, says Dr. R. K. Smiley, chairman of the University of Ottawa's department of medicine.

Hemophiliacs, whose blood doesn't clot, do have treatment and referral clinics in most major centres.

Dr. Smiley in an interview discussed the hemophiliac reference service, one of the first in Canada, at the Ottawa General Hospital. It began more than 20 years ago when doctors began referring hemophiliac patients to Dr. Smiley, a specialist in blood diseases and particularly interested in this disease.

It now treats about 65 patients from the Ottawa-eastern Ontario area.

Dr. Smiley and his associate, Dr. Pierre-Marc Robinson, usually see most patients themselves. The special treatment room and established routine avoid any frightening wait in an emergency department while treatment is discussed.

Both the patient and his family must live with a constant fear that any cut or injury might be disastrous.

For this reason, the clinic concept is particularly helpful, he said.

The clinic also provides day-to-day outpatient treatment, and this is important for at any one time about six may be coming two or three times a week — or even more. These include patients who have cuts, who are planning a visit to the dentist or who for any reason need the daily injections that keep up the level of the clotting factor.

As well, possibly another two or three of the 65 patients in the area may be in hospital at any one time, Dr. Smiley said. Many of these come in for surgery, such as operations on the knee joints in adult life.

There is an opportunity for patients to get to know one another and to discuss mutual problems.

Hemophiliac children often have emotional problems or problems of adjustment when they begin school, he said. The regular push-and-shove of the schoolyard can be a threat to a child to whom a scraped knee may mean going to hospital followed by a month of daily injections.

A man with hemophilia will pass the disease on to his daughters, but not to his sons. The daughter of a hemophiliac will not have symptoms of the disease, but she will pass it on to some, but not necessarily all, of her sons and daughters. Her boys would show the symptoms of the disease if they inherited it, but it's not possible to tell with certainty which daughters are carriers.

DOWN IN THE DUMPS

Madeline Knight, 18, has an unusual office, located in one of Miami's garbage dumps. She is Miami Metro's first "trash lady" and it is her job to see that people don't leave raw garbage. Her daily "housework" around the dump also includes raking tree limbs, paper and leaves into a neat pile for removal by truck crews. (AP Wirephoto)

Nonsuch Returns

If you happen to be on Dallas Road early morning next Friday (May 19) you just might think you are seeing a ghost. Either that or you'll get the feeling you've moved back in time more than 300 years and you are looking at the historic little ketch Nonsuch (the vessel took the first beaver skins to London from Hudson Bay) sailing into Victoria harbor.

In a way, you'd be right. It will be the Nonsuch. Not the original 17th century ketch, but a perfect full-size replica the Hudson's Bay Company has had constructed to commemorate its 300th anniversary in 1970.

Ports of Call

This second Nonsuch is to be in these waters throughout the summer, with ports of call here, in Vancouver and along the west coast.

She's in command of Capt. Adrian Small, who has been at the helm since the vessel was launched from J. Hinks and Son's yards at Appledore, Devon, on Aug. 26, 1968.

When her cruising here is finished, she will be transported to a permanent home in Winnipeg as a gift from the Hudson's Bay Company to the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

There, displayed under full sail, the ship will serve as a permanent and picturesque reminder of the original ketch.

French Trader

No doubt you remember that the first Nonsuch, Capt. Zachariah Gillam in command and with the adventurous French trader des Groseilliers aboard, set sail on June 3, 1668, from Gravesend, England, for Hudson Bay.

On Oct. 11, 1669, she returned with a precious cargo of beaver skins, proving that des Groseillers and his brother-in-law, Pierre Radisson were right in their theories of trading with the Indians from bases far north of the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes.

This cargo also led to the granting by King Charles the Second of England of a Royal Charter to his cousin Prince Rupert giving "sole trade and commerce" in the lands drained by rivers flowing into Hudson Bay and Strait and to the founding of the Hudsons' Bay Company, or as it was then called, "The Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay."

The modern Nonsuch, while not faced with the perils of the original, has had a fairly adventurous career.

Following the launching into the River Torridge in Devon, the replica was towed upriver to complete her fitting-out. Extensive sailing trials were concluded at Falmouth, after a stormy winter passage around Land's End. During the summer of 1969, the ship was displayed in over two dozen English ports and at Cherbourg, France.

Last Stop

Avonmouth, near Bristol, was her last stop in England. There, stripped of masts, sails and rigging, she was lifted to the after-deck of SS. Bristol City which sailed for Montreal toward the end of March, 1970.

Refitted in Sorel, Que., the Nonsuch then was ready to help the Hudson's Bay Company celebrate its 300th anniversary. That summer she called in at 30 communities along the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario and spent some time at Montreal's Man and His World exhibition. The summer of 1971 she again sailed the Great Lakes.

Finally, with masts, rigging and all equipment removed, she was hoisted from Lake Superior, lowered on her side and bolted to sets of wheels for a cross country run to Seattle.

Spent Winter

There she was again refitted and there she spent the winter months.

When Capt. Small and his crew of five bring the second Nonsuch to the dock in front of the Empress Hotel next Friday at 10:30 a.m., G. T. Richardson of Winnipeg, present governor of the Hudson's Bay Company will be waiting to greet her.

With him will be Rt. Hon. Viscount Amory, immediate past governor, who is coming from England to welcome the ketch, also British Columbia's Lieutenant-Governor J. H. Nicholson and other dignitaries.

Every day from then on, while the Nonsuch is here, the public will be welcomed aboard from two to four in the afternoon and again from seven to nine at night.

'Sleeping Dogs'

DEAR ABBY: How much should a girl tell a fellow about her past? I have been dating a very wonderful man for the past five months and he is getting serious, talking about marriage, etc.

He knows I am not lily white, but he doesn't know how many and who, and he would be shocked and disappointed if he knew. I am 24, and I have thought I was in love about ten times in my life.

I am not too proud of my conduct, but I've grown up a lot since then and I'm really not a tramp I've just had a lot of experience for my age.

What is your advice?—Libra.

DEAR LIBRA: I see no reason to provide anyone with the names and numbers of all the players. Let sleeping dogs lie.

DEAR ABBY: We are loyal Abby fans and have patiently gone through the problems of smokers, non-smokers, knitters, non-knitters, swingers, non-swingers, and so on. Now, we are asking you to please give us a short listen.

This is on behalf of all METER MAIDS who would like to answer nationwide, a few questions we are asked every day by at least a dozen people.

1. No. We do not have a "quota" of tickets that we have to meet every day.

2. No. We do not work on commission. (I wish we did.)

And while we are writing to you, Abby, will you please tell the public that we don't appreciate those cute little "oink" noises some people make behind our backs. Ours is a job just like anybody else's.—Misunderstood Meter Maids.

DEAR Ms M. M.: Will do. But every meter maid I've ever seen looked well able to defend herself.

DEAR ABBY: I saw a letter in your column not long ago which reminded me of my own situation. My in-laws are also continually giving us financial help, and to tell you the truth, I despise going over there any more. It's gotten to the point where there is just no hope for us to ever pay them back but they keep on giving.

Maybe I am too independent, but I feel that once you are married you are on your own. My husband doesn't see anything wrong with accepting a lot of things we can't afford. This situation has caused a lot of quarrels between us.

The more people give you, the more obligated you feel to that person, and you really don't want to see much of a person you feel obligated to.

I wish parents would leave their young married kids alone. I'm sure too much giving has caused many a marriage to split up. It certainly is working on ours.—Young Wife.

DEAR WIFE: From the mouths of babes . . . many well-intentioned and generous parents don't realize how heavy is the burden of gratitude.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Stitchery Workshops May 27, 28

When you go shopping for bed linens for the first time, the vast array of colors, patterns and sizes may be rather confusing. Your final choice will be determined by your taste, needs and budget limitations.

The 24-page "Your Linen Closet stresses that you should know the exact size of your mattress. This is important, especially when you buy fitted sheets.

This booklet is packed with helpful advice. It tells you, for example, that per bed you will need at least six sheets and pillowcases. It also shows you how to put a fitted sheet on the mattress and how to fold it after laundering. Bed-making with flat sheets is also explained.

In addition, you will learn how to care for your bed linens including the no-iron variety. A guide to stain removal from sheets and pillowcases is also included.

A free copy can be yours from: Public Relations Department, Dominion Textile Ltd., 1950 Sherbrooke Street, W., Montreal 109, P.Q.

'Double Talk' On Lake Cutting

Citizen groups Thursday called the logging industry's policy of setting aside beauty spots along streams, lakes and waterfalls as "double talk."

Howard English, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said the destruction of the natural setting around Sarita Falls near Bamfield is an example of a company saying one thing and doing the other.

MacMillan Bloedel has started to log the northwest bank of the spectacular falls — the last remaining beauty spot for more than 60 miles on the road to the west coast village of Bamfield. The banks of streams and lakes along the route have all been logged.

The Sarita Falls cutting plans were approved by the government's B.C. Forest Service.

English said recently he talked to the chief foresters of logging companies on the industry's land-use policies.

"I was told the industry's new policy is to save all beauty spots along rivers and lakes," he said. "It was shear double-talk."

A MB spokesman for the company said the industry's new land-use policy did not visualize setting aside beauty spots along every lake and river on the island.

"Our policy is to set aside beauty spots which are drawn to our attention by the public," he said. "I guess the public did not trigger to this one."

He said he would investigate.

Rick Careless, chairman of the Sierra Club, said the company was saying "what the public doesn't see, we cut."

"This means the setting around the most beautiful waterfall on the Island could be destroyed if the company gets there first," he said.

CABLE TV APPROVED

The Saanich Peninsula will become the first area of Canada to be serviced by cable television at special rural rates when installation of lines is completed later this summer.

Vincent Mielen, a spokesman for Davin Enterprises Ltd. which already operates a cable television system in the northern part of Saanich municipality, confirmed today his firm has received Ottawa approval for the extension along West Saanich Road beyond Beaver Lake Road, to service Prospect Lake, Oldfield Road and Spanish out to Durrance Lake.

Mielen said the Canadian Radio-Television Commission has approved a rural subscriber rate of $5 per month in addition to the regular $15 installation fee, and an urban rate of $4.50 per month.

The urban rate will apply to the Northridge and Royal Oak-Hastings areas, while the rural rate will apply to the rest.

Mielen said his firm has originally planned to be in operation with its full 44 miles of lines by June. However, installation and construction work is carried out by B.C. Tel and is running behind schedule because of other B.C. Tel work.

The total length of the distribution line system at present is 23.5 miles, he said.

Bomb Reward Posted

The prospector who discovered the vast copper deposit at Port Hardy now being worked by Utah Mine has posted a $2,000 reward for apprehension of the person or persons responsible for a bomb attempt last month.

The Port Hardy area prospector, Gordon Milbourne, this week announced the reward in the town's weekly newspaper.

The unsuccessful boming attempt was discovered April 25 during a routine inspection of an underground duct housing high-tension power lines, withing 50 feet of the main mine mill building.

It consisted of 20 sticks of dynamite in a duffle bag. A 15-foot fuse had been attached but was defective and burned out before it reached the dynamite bundle.

The Victoria RCMP subdivision is handling the investigation and Staff Sgt. Norman Sharp said today progress on it has been slow.

He said the dynamite used, originally thought to be part of a three-case lot stolen a few days earlier from MacMillan Bloedel seven miles south of Port Hardy, was discovered to have been old and therfore was not part of the theft.

Cave Study Given Grant

HESQUIAT HARBOUR (CP) — Indians of the Hesquiat Harbour area on the Vancouver Island west coast have been granted $5,000 to continue archaeological examination of tribal burial caves.

The grant is from a $61,000 cultural fund earmarked by the Indain affairs department for use in B.C. A similar grant last year permitted a start on gathering artifacts that were being looted by visitors to the area.

$4,000 Donated By Rotary

The Victoria Rotary Club donated $4,000 Thursday towards purchase of a hydraulic lift bus for patients at Mount St. Mary Hospital.

The bus is designed to carry six wheelchair patients. It has been in operation since early this year.

Club president R. T. Wallace presented the cheque to Sister Mary Justinian, the hospital's administrator.

Mrs. Ann Spicer, the hospital's volunteer services co-ordinator, told club members of the benefits to otherwise confined patients of sightseeing, travelling to special events or places of interest.

Other Rotary charitiable activities this year include a donation of $2,800 to the Happy Holidays organization to underwrite camps for the underprivileged; a $250 UVic scholarship, a grant of $350 to recognize student "good citizens" in Greater Victoria schools and $1,200 in support of the Rotary boys' choir.

Hijacker Counts Money—Vanishes

TEGUCIGAIPA, Honduras — Searchers have found a parachute harness and jumpsuit they believe were left by the hijacker of an Eastern Airlines plane after he jumped with $303,000 in ransom, the government said Thursday night.

Farmers told government agents they saw a man sitting on the ground counting money before he disappeared into the countryside.

The man's shoulder and hands were injured the farmers said.

Capt. Carlos Rene Sagastume, director of the national investigation department, said agents found the jumpsuit and harness Wednesday. The parachute probable was carried off by poor farmers, he added.

The hijacker took over an Eastern plane on a flight from Allentown, Pa. He collected $303,000 from the airline in Washington, D.C., where he allowed the passengers to disembark, and then flew on to New Orleans where a mechanical failure resulted in a change of airplanes. He parachuted from the Boeing 727 over Honduras on Saturday, 21 hours after the hijacking began.

WASHINGTON — Jeryl Chandler, 34, developed a bum transmission last February in his 1966 Ford. So he took the car in to be fixed.

According to a court affidavit he later swore out, Chandler paid $207.95 for a rebuilt transmission and the labor to install it.

But, according to the affidavit, the transmission still wasn't right. So Chandler went back. And back. And back.

Saturday, according to the affidavit, Chandler went back a last time. He threatened to sue if they didn't do the job right this time.

In reply, according to the affidavit, a mechanic jacked up Chandler's car, removed the transmission, and pushed the car into the street.

"There's your car," Chandler quoted the man as saying.

On Thursday, the owner and manager of the company were arrested and charged with grand larceny of an automobile transmission.

MARSEILLES, France — The thief who stole zoologist Jean Durant's car here is in for a shock if he opens two white metal boxes inside. Police warned that each box contains three deadly cobra snakes.

NEW YORK — Joseph (Crazy Joe) Gallo, reputed underworld boss slain in a hail of bullets April 7, has left an estate of less than $10,000, said papers filed in Manhattan Surrogate's Court. Gallo, 43, died without leaving a will and Surrogate Judge Millard L. Midonick granted Gallo's widow Sina the right to administer the estate, which will be shared by his daughter from a previous marriage.

LENNON

Zero Hour For John, Yoko

NEW YORK (WP) — John Winston Lennon, who describes himself as a "composer, musician, artist, film-maker, author and actor," will likely be ordered deported from the United States today.

Lennon, better known as a Beatle, and his wife Yoko Ono have overstayed their visas, so they will have to leave, according to U.S. officials.

Government officials say the law prevents them from renewing Lennon's visa, because he was convicted of a marijuana offence in Britain four years ago. The Lennons maintain that the U.S. is really trying to deport them because of anti-war activities.

DAN GEORGE

NEW YORK — Two women who failed the civil service test of lifting a 25-pound barbell over the head with one hand filed suit in state Supreme Court, contending that the requirement is silly and discriminatory against the female sex. Marily Sontag, 35, and Sophie Steptoeff, 58, took the test to gain permanent status in their jobs as audio-visual technicians at Hunter College.

CHIEF DAN BOWS OUT

VANCOUVER—A conflict with film commitments has forced Chief Dan George to withdraw from the Playhouse Theatre company's production of King Lear, and the company has decided to cancel the presentation rather than replace him.

Artistic Director Paxton Whitehead said he would rather drop the production "than continue without a lear of the strong emotional calibre of Chief Dan."

JANE FONDA, BRANDO FILED AWAY BY FBI

WASHINGTON — Columnist Jack Anderson says the FBI has secret files on Jane Fonda, Marlon Brando, Paul Newman, Harry Belafonte and othe Hollywood stars.

One of the FBI's fattest dossiers is on Miss Fonda, writes Anderson.

None of the stars under surveillance was accused of any crime or suspected subversion, according to the columnist.

Anderson says the most faithful fans of Miss Fonda, a staunch critic of the Vietnam war, are FBI agents who monito her activities around the world and submit detailed reports on her anti-war routines.

HOW CAREFULLY do customers read advertising signs? Closely enough to respond with plenty of chuckles and a few questions to this one, says George Wellburn of sign beside his store at Cook and Pandora. Questions like: do you really mean it? and who does the installing? Sign has produced "a bit of a laugh" which was the idea in the first place, says Wellburn. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Scotland Yard Empire Falling

LONDON (WP) — Robert Mark, the new metropolitan police commissioner, has acted to end the free-wheeling autonomy of Scotland Yard's scandal-tainted plainclothes detectives.

The "force within a force," Mark's own description, has been told detectives will no longer report to their higher officials but will now be directed by the uniformed officers commanding London's 23 police divisions.

This attack on the empire built up by the detectives amounts to a revolution and has already touched off angry complaints from the plainclothesmen.

The 55-year-old Mark, a deceptively mild-appearing man, has been commissiner only one week after serving five years as the yard's number two man. He has timed his quiet revolution with all the skill that his admirers, many of them outside the metropolitan force, expected.

The new orders follow hard on the heels of the recent conviction of two ranking yard detectives accused of planting evidence to shake down a convict-informer. By moving in his first days, Mark is making clear to the 3,200 detectives and 19,000 other men on the metropolitan force that he intends to be boss.

Knowledgeable authorities agree that police corruption cannot match that of Chicago, New York, Boston or any other major American city. But the fact that the supposedly incorruptible Scotland Yard is infected at all has come as a shock to many Britons.

The commander of the yard's elite "flying squad" was suspended from duty in March after a tabloid disclosed that he had taken a holiday in Cyprus with a Soho Strip club owner. The commander Kenneth Drury, has steadfastly maintained he did nothing wrong.

Also last month, five flying squad members were charged with conspiracy in a drugs case and three were accused of trying to extort money from a citizen.

Mark and others are known to believe that the small cancer of corruption among Yard detectives feeds on the absence of outside supervision, from the tradition of handling everything within an unsupervised criminal investigation division.

It is this empire that Mark intends to dissolve. Apart from ordering plainclothesmen to report to uniformed commanders, the new commissioner took these other steps:

—He has placed the criminal investigation division, the authority for non-divisional detectives, under an "outsider." The new assistant commissioner, Colin Woods, does not come from the ranks of the detectives but from the traffic department.

—Mark has directed his four deputy assistant commissioners to supervise the division's four area commanders and "maintain a constant scrutiny of divisional detective work."

—Mark intends to shuffle uniformed and plainclothesmen back and forth between assignments, particularly at middle management levels.

—Finally, the commissioner is setting up a new office to receive and investigate complaints against the police. It will be manned by both uniformed and plainclothes agents. That will at least insure that plainclothesmen can no longer bury with ease citizen complaints against their own.

Not surprisingly, police reporters on newspapers here heard nothing but outraged howls from detectives when they interviewed about the new orders. Early this year, the top criminal investigation division man, Assistant Commissioner Peter Brodie, resigned in anticipation of Mark's new era.

As police commissioners in the United States know, it is one thing to issue orders and quite another to have them obeyed. The big question is whether Mark's revolution will go beyond the paper stage.

Prolific Writer Thorough Man

CALGARY (CP) — Art Reykdal's urge to write is so overwhelming that he has typed his latest book three times.

Normally, a writer types a manuscript and sends it to a publishing company where it is set in type, printed and bound.

Not Art Reykdal. His book, From Bad to Verse, has 454 pages. With 35 to 50 lines a page and 10 words to a line, that's about 160,000 words to type. Multiplied by three, you get a grand total of 480,000 words.

He did the original, retyped it to get the basic spacing, then did it again to space the words so that the margins would be even.

The book, a collection of recollections, was bound professionally. There's only one copy.

Mr. Reykdal is a printer at the Calgary Albertan. He has been a magazine editor, reporter, columnist and printer on publications in Northern Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

His first work was a history of the Greater Amateur Athletic Association of Lundar, Man. Then came The Autobiography of a Damned Fool and Adventures in Frustration.

From Bad to Verse will not win a Pulitzer Prize, says Mr. Reykdal, but it's entertaining.

WOODEN SHOES STILL POPULAR

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — Dutch clogs—the familiar article of footwear which the name of Holland so vividly conjures up in the minds of foreigners— are still popular.

Today, some 700 Dutch factories turn out millions of machine-made pairs every year, for people in town and country alike.

In the past all clogs were individually made, but today there are only about 40 skilled clogmakers left who hand-carve them.

Most are made from poplar and willow wood. The tree trunk is sawed into pieces, corresponding in length to the desired shoe size. These lengths, in turn, are split into several pieces, each piece being the raw material for one shoe.

Wooden clogs are more functional than they seem. At first sight they look thick and clumsy, but in actual fact they are light, comfortable, water repellent and warm.

Women generally wear low-cut clogs with leather straps, and some have painted shoelaces. Many are decorated with colorful windmill or flower designs, while others are beautifully carved.

A BRIEF AND COLORFUL STORY FOR MEN BY Harvey Woods

That Harvey Woods is something else. Takes DuPont stretch nylon, builds a bikini with extra comfort, then colors it blue, green, mauve and pink. Wild. Each 2.00

Then, as if he hadn't gone far enough, old Harv gears up the plant again and adds, you guessed it, stripes. Blue ones, gold ones, red ones and even good grief, mauve ones.
Good old Harv. Each, 2.00

Don't tell anybody, but if you're a denim man there's a low rise brief for you. Plain it's not. Comes in gold, cedar, navy, or red. No stripes though. Cool. Each 1.50

Topless is nowhere with Harvey.
So he makes shirts. Puts in 20% nylon to end sag and bag. Adds color. Winds up with navy, purple blue and gold. The T-shirt. Who'd go topless?? Each 2.50

This brief and colorful story is interpreted for you in Woodward's Men's Furnishings

New Budget Improves Relations with Business

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former Ontario premier John Robarts says the new federal budget improves relations between government and business.

"Nobody was under the illusion that the government's relations with the business community were good and this budget goes a long way toward improving relations," he said.

Robarts, who was Conservative premier of Ontario for nine years until he retired in February, 1971, was in Vancouver for an annual meeting of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., of which he is a director.

The Trudeau government, he said, was a theoretical government. It tested a lot of theories on taxation, pensions, welfare, medical care and other social services.

"The present budget comes back to basics. Now we're getting to the real guts of the game — what do we do to produce jobs for people?"

U.S. Ceasefire Offer Details Open to Negotiation

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States has left open for negotiation the critical details of its offer for a "cease-fire throughout Indochina" that would accompany an American military disengagement from the war.

Dispute about the exact meaning of the Nixon administration's cease-fire proposal was threaded through Senate debate this week over end-the-war legislation, and also aroused questioning by diplomats and newsmen.

Administration officials acknowledged that the cease-fire terminology is open to various interpretations that are being reserved for diplomatic bargaining.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger said on Tuesday that "we will be delighted to spell out the details of our proposal as soon as a negotiation starts . . ." In these negotiations, said Kissinger, the United States would display "a generous spirit," with "the attitude of bringing about a rapid end to the war."

The deliberately vague response was given to sidestep one of the many questions on the cease-fire offer: Whether the United States would insist that the cease-fire require withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces who have crossed into South Vietnam.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird was reminded at his news conference Wednesday that he stated on April 7 that there could not even be negotiations until North Vietnam "withdraws" its forces who launched a "massive invasion" across the Demilitarized Zone on March 30.

Laird was not alone in stating that condition, which he repeated more forcefully on April 18 in a Senate foreign relations committee hearing, saying it would be "the height of irresponsibility" to hold negotiations while North Vietnam continues its "violation" of earlier agreements.

Secretary of State William Rogers, testifying a day earlier, on April 17, also originally ruled out negotiations "while this major invasion is under way." But Rogers reconsidered a little later in the hearing, and he added the qualification that the United States will not negotiate further until it is convinced "the other side has a serious purpose or, second, until this invasion is repelled or they withdraw."

Both statements, of course, have been overtaken by events in which the United States changed its position and did resume briefly both the formal negotiations with North Vietnam in Paris and the secret talks, the latter between Kissinger and North Vietnamese politburo member Le Duc Tho on May 2.

Laird acknowledged at his news conference Wednesday that the position he originally stated is "out of date," and was "changed by the president . . ."

A great number of questions, however, still hang over the entire U.S. proposal for ending the American share of the Vietnamese war.

President Nixon, in his Monday night version of the latest offer for ending U.S. participation in the war, said that present intensified military actions against North Vietnam and its supply lines will cease when Hanoi agrees that:

1. All American prisoners of war "must be returned." 2. There "must be an internationally supervised cease-fire throughout Indochina. 3. "Once prisoners of war are released, and once the internationally supervised cease-fire has begun, we will stop all acts of force throughout Indochina." 4. "At that time we will proceed with a complete withdrawal of all American forces from Vietnam within four months."

This proposal, on its face, states no requirement for the parallel withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces from South Vietnam. In earlier versions of this proposal, first offered by Kissinger to Le Duc Tho on May 31, 1971, and subsequently amplified, the United states explicitly laid down no demand for mutual troop withdrawal.

Kissinger, in discussing the U.S. military disengagement approach on Jan. 26, after President Nixon disclosed the 1969-71 sequence of secret Kissinger-Tho talks, said of the May 31, 1971, offer:

"This was the first time that the United States has indicated a willingness to set a date, the first time that the United States was prepared to do so unilaterally; that is to say, without an equivalent assurance of withdrawal from the other side."

In other words, the United States was offering unilateral withdrawal of its troops. Administration officials, including Secretary Rogers, have said since the present Communist offensive began that previous offers made to North Vietnam still stand. Kissinger said that in his May 2 meeting with Le Duc Tho, the Hanoi envoy refused "even to discuss" the U.S. proposals, but Kissinger expressed the view that in time North Vietnam may "believe that it now has proved its military capacity to the point where it could afford a purely military solution . . ."

When and if that time comes, there would be a barrage of bargaining questions, including many that presently are being left unanswered.

What would be the duration of the cease-fire? What kind of cease-fire would it be, a standstill cease-fire, a cease-fire permitting regrouping of forces, etc.? Would South Vietnam's government have a veto over the terms of the cease-fire? Could military conditions for the cease-fire involve political factors?

What would happen in Laos or Cambodia, to U.S.-supported forces and American personnel in those countries — would they be withdrawn?

What happens if the cease-fire is violated after U.S. troops are withdrawn from South Vietnam, would U.S. power be reintroduced?

That question was directed at Secretary Laird. He called it "a very iffy question," but Laird said a decision would have to be made and "my recommendation" would be "to use the (American) air and sea power" if the internationally supervised cease-fire is violated.

Victorian Gets Medal For Scouting

C. Wilfred Hofstrand, 2046 Avondale Rd., has been awarded the Medal of Merit for good service to scouting by Governor General Michener.

Hofstrand has continuously served the scout movement in Victoria for the past 16 years as cub leader for the 2nd Victoria "A" and 8th Garry Oak Cub Packs.

A King's Scout in his youth, he has organized and directed camps for hundreds of cubs during the past 16 years.

He will receive the medal at a forthcoming meeting of regional council.

Jury Hears Details Preceding Stabbing

A beer-parlor closing-time argument Feb. 24 which ended in the death of one man and a non-capital murder charge against the other appeared to be only a shoving match to the former girl friend of the victim.

Peggy Tychkowsky, 20, told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday she had argued with the accused, Ronald Arthur Flewin, 21, earlier in the evening before he got into a dispute with Russell Streeter, 21, in the parking lot behind the Colony Motor Inn.

Streeter died later that night as the result of three stab wounds, court was told.

Flewin pleaded not guilty Thursday morning before Mr. Justice John G. Ruttan and a jury of six men and six women to a charge of causing the death of Streeter by stabbing during that incident.

LIVED WITH HIM

Miss Tychkowsky, who said she lived with Flewin for a year about two years before and had a child by him, testified she and Streeter, who she had known for three weeks, entered the Colony about 7:30 p.m. and Feb. 23.

She testified that during the course of the evening she saw Flewin sitting at another table with his girlfriend.

She said she went over to Flewin and told him: "I like your pants." And he replied "thanks."

She said she then told Flewin "they're my pants. When do I get them back?" She said he then answered: "You're not going to get your pants back."

Miss Tychkowsky testified that she said "in a joke" to Flewin that "those guys" sitting at her table, including Streeter, would get the pants back for her.

MET LATER

Under examination by Crown prosecutor Ken Murphy, Miss Tychkowsky said nothing more transpired between her and Flewin until they met in the parking lot at closing time, about 1:30 a.m.

Streeter had left her for a few minutes, she said, and Flewin came up to her and asked when he could see Nicky, their 3½-year-old child.

She said she told Flewin he couldn't see the children "until the assault charge came to court," and Flewin replied: "I'm not going to court." (The reference to an assault charge was not explained Thursday to the jury.)

Streeter then appeared, she said, and asked her if Flewin was bothering her.

"I said he wasn't, and Ron said he didn't want any hassle."

Then Flewin told Streeter: "You're not going to stop me from seeing my kid."

At this point, Miss Tychkowsky testified, Flewin, whose back was to her, started to push Streeter, who was facing her.

Streeter "went back a few feet," she said, and then "Ron left and Russell walked away."

"Rick Lacy came up and asked me where all the blood on the ground was from ... Rick grabbed Ron by the shoulder and told him to cool it, the police were here."

She testified she then saw Flewin "make a motion and put something behind his back." She added she "didn't see anything in his hand."

BLOOD ON GROUND

Having seen the blood on the ground, she said she started walking through the parking lot looking for Streeter, before she saw him lying by the police car.

In earlier testimony, Dr. John Marsden, a pathologist at Victoria General Hospital, said his autopsy showed that Streeter had three stab wounds on his body, two of them of little significance.

He said a stab wound to the chest penetrated the heart wall and caused death.

Dr. Siaw Lim Yong, an intern at the hospital, testified that when Streeter was brought into the emergency ward at 1:55 a.m., he saw that cardiac arrest had occurred.

He said he then tried to revive the victim by chest massage, direct current shock and adrenalin shots before pronouncing him dead at 2:07 a.m.

Testimony continues today in what is expected to be a three-day trial.

Just Ducky!

Two-year-old Ian Gunn, of Toronto, wanted to play when he spotted this duck in the courtyard of that city's city hall. But the duck had other ideas. Unfortunately, the flying fowl saw him and made tracks. Whether the duck went north or returned south is not recorded.

Bennett Denies B.C. Drags Trade Heels

Premier Bennett today took issue with a charge by John S. Walton, executive vice-president of Canadian Liquid Air Ltd. that B.C. is not doing enough to promote Pacific Rim trade.

Walton told the purchasing and management association of Canada in Vancouver Thursday that in spite of the "giant mines and forest industry complexes that owe their B.C. life to Pacific Rim trade, the potential is far from being realized."

He also found it unusual that B.C. does not have a trade office in Japan, the province's single best overseas customer. B.C.'s only overseas trade office is at B.C. House in London.

Said Bennett: "We just don't believe in overseas trade offices. We find that Europeans — and especially the Japanese — want to deal with the heads of government or the heads of industry. If you don't have that kind of rank then you don't see their top people."

Bennett also pointed out that there is constant discussion "particularly between B.C. and Japanese officials" on the promotion of trade.

CAPOZZI UNDECIDED

Socred MLA Herb Capozzi (Vancouver Centre) said today he has still not decided whether he will run again for a seat in the B.C. legislature in the next provincial election.

There have been reports that Capozzi was considering a switch to the Liberal party but he said today:

"I have never talked to anyone from the Liberal Party" on that subject.

The only question he is considering, he said, is "whether or not I will run at all."

No Blame in Death

The death of Mrs. Carol Thoresen, 30, of Port Alberni, at Eric Martin Institute, April 29, came as a result of a self-administered drug overdose, a coroner's jury ruled Wednesday.

No blame was attached in the death.

The woman took the drug, testimony indicated, about 10:30 p.m. April 28. At 2:30 the following morning the woman was found in her room at EMI with self-inflicted slash wounds on her wrists and ankles.

Nursing staff at that time found a razor blade, a C-2 tablet and evidence of vomiting. Mrs. Thoresen admitted taking two handfuls of the drug, which has a codeine content.

Edith W. Noel, a senior member of EMI's nursing staff, testified that the woman was sent to Royal Jubilee Hospital for treatment of the cuts.

Mrs. Noel said she notified Royal Jubilee staff of the possible drug overdose, and contacted the dead woman's psychiatrist and a gastroenterologist who was involved in her treatment.

No emetic to induce vomiting was given and Mrs. Noel said Dr. Richard Wait, the gastroenterologist, said since the pills had been taken several house previously, an emetic might be useless.

A Boy, a Gun, an Ulster Street

BELFAST (UPI) — The soldier stiffened into sudden alertness. "Halt," he shouted.

But the youth paid no heed. He ambled on down the street, smiling.

The Gordon Highlanders were on patrol in an armagh Roman Catholic housing estate. They suspected the youth was carrying a gun.

"Halt," helled the soldier a second time.

The youth stopped, a puzzled expression on his face.

"Raise your hands above your head," said the soldier.

The youth stared at him for a moment. Then he grinned. His right hand slid toward his bulging jacket.

The soldier sprang. His rifle butt smashed into the youth's face, sending him crumpling to the ground.

As he fell, a gun slithered across the pavement.

The soldier picked it up. "Blimey," he said. "It's a toy."

He looked closely at the youth lying on the ground. "You poor bloddy sod," he said, softly.

The youth was a 19-year-old afflicted with mongolism, extreme mental deficiency dating from birth.

"Whoever allowed you to play with this should be ashamed," the soldier said, picking the youth up. "We'll have you right in no time."

An army spokesman later praised the soldier for putting his own life at risk.

"In that split second, faced with a youth reaching for a gun, he could have shot him. That would be the natural action of any soldier. Instead, he used his rifle butt and gave the boy his life.

"Not many soldiers would have done it."

The spokesman said the incident pointed up once more the danger parents ran in allowing toy guns to be carried.

"This sort of thing is happening all the time," the spokesman said. "Our soldiers are being shot at by snipers. Naturally they are razor-sharp on patrol. What are they expected to do when they see a gun poking around the corner aimed at them?

"Are they supposed to wait and see who is holding the gun? To their credit, many of them have taken unnatural risks to ensure no kids got hurt.

"These are dangerous days. It is a terrible risk for parents to take.

"This time it was only a broken jaw . . . next time?"

Cleanliness Bill Labelled Dirty Deal

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia's Liberal government has been told by a former Conservative premier that its environmental bill threatens people's liberties.

G. I. Smith (PC — Colchester) said Thursday that the bill, described by Finance Minister Peter Nicholson as without parallel in Canada, might put people out of business or out of jobs without appeal.

Smith appeared to have the support of some government members in his criticism. He said the legislation went farther and gave more power to the ministry it will set up than any War Measures Act.

"Someone has lost sight of the common, everyday way of life" in defining such things as contaminant, environment and polution, Smith said. The bill would regulate every aspect of life to its most minute detail.

Contaminant is defined in the bill as "a solid, liquid, gas, odor, heat, sound, vibration, radiation or combination of them, and includes any transfer of energy, present in the environment in excessive quantities as a result directly or indirectly of the activities of man."

Nicholson adjourned debate to permit members to "reflect" on the bill's provisions. He said if the department had a "benevolent minister," the act would work well.

Bill Hurts Fishermen: Stevens

OTTAWA (CP)—Fishermen in Canada should be given the right to bargain collectively under new industrial relations legislation proposed by the federal government, the Commons labor committee was told Thursday.

Homer Stevens, president of the British Columbia-based United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, told the committee that legal distinctions between employee fishermen and self-employed fishermen are unrealistic and outmoded.

The government bill would deprive 75 per cent of B.C. salmon fishermen of their collective bargaining rights, in contradiction of existing federal and provincial legislation, he said.

Most fishermen who do bargain collectively over the sale of their catch do so under provincial legislation. Mr. Stevens argued, however, that the question of jurisdiction is unsettled. But federal legislation should not be postponed until the courts can resolve the constitutional issue, he said.

He said the fish-processing industry has already begun a campaign to deprive fishermen of bargaining rights under either federal or provincial legislation.

Branding Knocked

SASKATOON (CP) — Police Chief Jim Kettles said Thursday a system for branding items in private homes for identification by police when recovering stolen goods would be a waste of time.

He was commenting on a report that the system had been adopted on an experimental basis in Regina. He said that if items were branded, "the vandals would simply grind off the mark," causing more confusion.

Chinese Proverb Gives an Answer

To paraphrase a Chinese proverb: If you want to be happy forever though living in a balcony apartment, plant garden troughs and tubs with Saxifragas, Sempervivums and Sedums. If you are limited in space, confine your choice to Saxifragas.

This may sound drastic until you look at colored illustration in an alpine plant book; a display at an alpine show; or at collections of these plants at an alpine specialist's nursery. There you find dozens of plants of varying appearance in each of the three categories.

All are good for container-growing with their main needs being light, well-drained, loamy grit, a sunny situation and sufficient watering during their growing period. Some Saxifragas like lime or limestone chips; some like to be grown on the north side of rock where the soil will be cooler. Others want a gritty acid soil.

★ ★ ★

In appearance, this group of three alpine genera will be low rosettes of leaves; tightly packed cushions; or mounds of tiny fleshy leaves.

Their height ranges between one and six inches; though flowering stems on certain Saxifragas will be from one to three feet.

Mainly, the flowers are strictly in proportion to the height of plants. In time, the spread of the rosettes, cushions and mounds will be amazing, in many cases covering rock pieces originally placed to give height (and moisture retention in the soil without frequent watering) to the flat container planting.

And now for color. Not only do the leaves take various forms—almost cactus-like, encrusted with silver or resembling jelly-beans—but they run into extraordinary colorings of bronze, purple, violet, dark crimson and every shade of green.

Some of the plants are even more colorful in winter when low temperatures intensify leaf coloring if perfect drainage is present.

★ ★ ★

On a balcony this is more easily managed than in a garden, for the containers may be given protection from overhead rain yet still be fully exposed to air and light.

With a modest collection assembled from the three groups with the aid of an expert in the plants, flowers would be possible from February until August. The colors are as varied as those in the leaves, ranging from white through yellow to pink and red, all long lasting and exquisitely proportioned to the plants.

To obtain these you will have to search out the local specialist growers of alpine and rock garden plants. Between them they have a wonderful assortment. A membership in the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society will be a help too.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As all duplicate players know, scoring is on a relative basis. On occasion, one gets to a game contract which, after the opening lead is made, is revealed to be a very poor contract. In this situation, the expert declarer goes all out to make as many extra tricks as he can, so that his score will equal, or surpass, that of the other declarers who will be playing the identical cards in the superior game contract.

The arrival at an inferior game contract was the lot of our South declarer when this deal arose in the 1971 National Championships.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

North-South vulnerable.
South deals.

NORTH
♡ A K 8 7 6 2
◇ 10 5 4
♣ Q 8 2

WEST
♠ Q 8 6 5
♡ Q 4
◇ 6 2

EAST
♠ 7 4 3
♡ J 10 9
◇ Q J 7 3
♣ 10 7 4

SOUTH
♠ K J 10 9 2
♡ 5 3
◇ A K 9 8
♣ J 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

After South had captured the opening club lead with his nine-spot, a glance at his combined assets told him that he would not get a good score for making his nine-trick contract (100 for the trick score). As he viewed it, almost all of the North-South pairs figured to arrive at four hearts. And with the normal division of the five outstanding hearts (3-2), all they figured to lose would be two club tricks and one heart. Thus the latter would obtain a trick score of 120.

So declarer concluded that making nine tricks was just about the same as going down. Therefore, his only hope was to try for ten tricks, even if in so trying he went down.

After winning the opening club lead, South played a spade to dummy's ace. He then led a low diamond, and inserted his nine-spot after East had followed with the three. Things began to perk up when the nine won the trick.

Dummy was re-entered via the king of hearts, and the ten of diamonds was led. When East put up the jack, South captured the trick with his king. Dummy was re-entered with the ace of hearts, after which the board's remaining diamond was led. South's eight being finessed successfully. The ace of diamonds was cashed next. On the last two diamond leads West discarded a spade and a club.

Declarer now led a club, and West was thrown into the lead. After cashing his three clubs, West had no choice but to lead a spade from his remaining doubleton Q-8 into declarer's K-J. Thus South made 10 tricks, for a very fine score, since 10 tricks at no trump count more than 10 tricks at hearts.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

"I've got three funny numbers," said Bill. "If you add the first half to the square of the second half you get the number again. That goes for each of them."

"Four digits, eh?" Ted thought a moment. "You mean like if 2347 was 23 plus the square of 47, but it isn't. Let me figure them out."

You try.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

9 IN MEMORIAM

AFFLECK—In loving memory of our dear son, Tom, who passed away May 12, 1965.
Loving thoughts, memories dear,
Cherished more each passing year.

PARKER—In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Anne, who passed away May 12, 1970.
Close to our hearts she will always stay,
Loved and remembered every day.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Deaf Don't Get Fair Shake on Jobs

I read in the Volta Review recently that 80 per cent of the deaf persons in the United States are employed in manual labor, as contrasted with the general population, of which only half are employed in manual labor. Also, only 17 per cent of deaf people are found in white collar work, compared with 46 per cent of the general population. The author of the article, Professor Vernon, claims that "This is due primarily to failure of our educational system to give the deaf person a chance to develop his intelligence constructively, and then to use it vocationally."

It is fortunate that educators are now beginning to become aware of the fact that we are "Wasting" many Americans, because although they are handicapped in some way, they could work well at certain kind of jobs. We have not been very imaginative about finding worthwhile and challenging kinds of work for these persons.

On the last page of the Volta Review I read that for the past 60 years, a little book called "The Raindrop" has been a perennial favorite in schools for the deaf. In it, there are more than 100 classic stories, such as Robin Hood, Evangeline, Little Red Riding Hood, Pocohontas and Macbeth, all told in a way that makes these stories clear to young readers who are deaf. It is a wonderful introduction to the world's great literature.

NON-SMOKERS ARE COMPLAINING

I read that Senator Schweiker of Pennsylvania has introduced a bill that would require every form of transportation to provide some area for non-smokers. I can understand this, because one of my relatives, as long as he lived, was so distressed by cigarette smoke that he had to resign from his club. His son had even more trouble with cigarette smoke because it produced tiny blisters on his corneas (the window on the front of the eyeball).

Smelter Denies Guilt—But Pays

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — A smelting company, fighting charges it polluted the air with toxic lead fumes, has agreed to a $1 million out-of-court settlement, including the treatment of 135 area children for lead poisoning.

American Smelting and Refining Co., however, denied Thursday its operations had anything to do with the poisoning of the children.

The agreement meant the end of the 10-week suit filed by the city of El Paso and the state of Texas against the company last February.

"They are going to be killing our kids," assistant city attorney John Ross in the opening arguments. "And we won't put up with that in our community."

METALS BLAMED

City and state attorneys said 135 children living near the plant had been found with high lead levels in their blood streams near the toxic level. The attorneys attributed the poisoning to the firm's emission of toxic heavy metals such as lead, cadmium, zinc and arsenic into the atmosphere.

But the company had maintained throughout the trial that the city and state had jumped to conclusions without adequate testing.

"We don't believe all the facts are in," Jack C. Duncan, attorney for the smelting company, had said.

HUMANITARIAN

The company Thursday again denied any responsibility for the lead poisoning in the children but agreed to pay medical care for 30 months for the 135 children for "humanitarian" reasons. These costs have already reached the $20,000 level and are expected to climb much higher in future months.

American Smelting also agreed to pay $19,500 in court costs and pay $80,500 in fines for violating state air pollution standards. In addition, the company agreed to install $750,000 in emission control equipment and to deposit $30,000 in escrow to pay for possible future violations of the Clean Air Act.

The company told the court it would agree to be constantly monitored for any future violations. The $30,000 will remain in escrow until Dec. 31 when a sulphuric acid recovery plant, designed to destroy air pollutants, is expected to be operational.

U.S. Wheat Predictions Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agriculture department forecast Thursday a 1972 U.S. winter wheat crop of 1,149,064,000 bushels, down one per cent from the 1971 output and 11 per cent less than an initial estimate made last December.

Officials said further government farm program curbs announced in January along with drought and freeze damage were important factors in the reduced estimate.

The department's crop reporting board said the forecast was based on field conditions as of May 1. Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer.

In December, the department estimated the winter wheat crop at 1.29 billion bushels.

The report said only 82.4 per cent of the winter wheat acreage planted last fall would be harvested this year, the lowest percentage since 1963.

There was no production estimate for durum and other spring planted wheat, but an earlier projection based on acres planted and recent yield trends put 1972 production at 374 million bushels.

Europe Joins Space Bid

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada and the European Space Research Organization (ESRO) have reached an agreement to have ESRO participate in the satellite portion of the Communications Technology Satellite (CTS) program.

The agreement, described by one federal spokesman as the "first of its kind with Europe," will "open the doors" to Canadian participation in future European communications satellite projects.

Final details on the exact interpretations by Canada and ESRO of the agreement are being worked out between Paris and Ottawa this week.

A ceremony for signing of the "memorandum of agreement" between Canada and the 10-country organization has been scheduled for next week in Ottawa.

Under the agreement, ESRO will supply free a special solar cell blanket, a secondary travelling wave tube — which drives the satellite's transmitter — and an experimental amplifier, for use on CTS.

The satellite is to be launched by the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) in 1975. CTS represents the "second generation" of communications technology, of the type which will replace ANIK, Canada's first communications satellite scheduled to be launched this fall.

Canada normally would have purchased the solar cell power system and the travelling wave tube —two major components which are not now produced in Canada — from the U.S.

Thus, the ESRO agreement may produce a financial saving for Canada, though ESRO's participation is expected to boost management costs for the project.

More important, in the view of federal officials, the agreement represents a major step in penetrating walls around the European Common Market in the aerospace field.

ESRO "badly wants to test" their components, which are being developed for use in a European domestic communication system.

Toastmistress Meeting

Members of two Victoria Toastmistress clubs will attend the 6th annual conference, Pacific Northwest Region of the International Toast Mistress Clubs to be held at the Village Green Inn, Duncan, May 19 to 21.

Mrs. W. A Ludlow, regional supervisor of the Pacific Northwest Region and member of the Arbutus Toastmistress Club of Victoria, will chair the business sessions.

Others are Mrs. R. S. Butt, chairman of the Toastmistress Council and Mrs. Jack Gordon, who is co-ordinator of the conference.

Delegates from all parts of British Columbia, the Yukon, Alsaka, Washington and California, will attend the three-day meeting.

Ford Sees Disaster In Emission Laws

DETROIT (UPI) — Henry Ford II warned Thursday of "a devastating impact on income and employment" if auto companies shut down their plants because they could not meet federal emission standards for 1975 midel cars.

Ford, speaking at Ford Motor Company's 17th annual stockholders meeting, said failure to suspend the standards could force suspension of most U.S. automotive manufacturing operations in 1975. This would mean shutting down nearly five per cent of the U.S. industrial capacity, he said.

Ford's U.S. passenger car and light truck manufacturing operations alone would increase U.S. unemployment by about 8,000 persons, according to Ford, the company's board chairman.

Road Crews On The Job

Highways department maintenance crews in Port Alberni and the Courtenay-Campbell River area returned to work this morning after a one-day walkout.

A spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union said he has not heard of any new walkouts.

The up-Island walkout, which followed similar ones in Victoria and Prince George, was to protest the lack of collective bargaining rights in the provincial civil service.

VOTE COST CURB EYED

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday night the government will introduce a bill shortly limiting campaign expenditures and requiring "the state to pay at least part of the bill of election expenses."

The bill was approved by the cabinet Thursday morning, he told a public meeting at an east-end high school on the first day of a two-day visit to southern Ontario.

Asked if the bill will be passed before the next federal election, expected this year, Mr. Trudeau replied "that depends when the election will be."

It was announced later in Ottawa that the bill is expected to be introduced Tuesday.

Ottawa officials said the bill would set up a system of examining expenditures and reporting on them and also require candidates to disclose — in part — the source of funds used to promote their election.

Quebec Strikers Hit Schools, Hospitals

QUEBEC (CP) — Industrial and government facilities, schools, hospitals, newspapers and radio stations were hit again today in Quebec, fourth day of a groundswell of labor unrest that began with imprisonment of three top provincial union leaders Tuesday.

Reports of new walkouts and demonstrations poured in hourly from widely separated areas of the province.

The first death linked directly to the turmoil was reported today. A man struck by a car Wednesday during a demonstration has died in Sept-Isles, 30 miles north of Quebec City.

The situation was described as a "crisis" by one of two Quebec cabinet ministers who said they had withdrawn their resignations from Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa's cabinet because of the labor trouble.

The planned resignations had been linked to other matters involving constitutional dealings with the federal government.

Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, said Thursday night he was staying on "principally because of the crisis we are living through."

Jean-Paul L'Allier, civil service minister and the man at the centre of the storm in contract negotiations between the government and 250,000 public service workers, announced in a statement early today he will continue in the cabinet to help find a solution to the current unrest.

Montreal was without any of its six daily newspapers today after walkouts by various employees of the city's four French-language dailies and the two English-language ones.

Elsewhere, L'Action did not publish today at Quebec City and the provincial capital's other French-language daily, Le Soleil, was experiencing a walkout of some employees.

On the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where demonstrators took over Sept-Iles earlier this week until police reinforcements were flown in by Canadian Armed Forces aircraft, there were reports of new walkouts overnight and today by miners, construction workers and teachers at Sept-Iles, Baie Comeau and Hauterive.

Firebombs were thrown at one metals company plant in Baie Comeau overnight and at a garage door on the property of Municipal Affairs Minister Maurice Tessier in Rimouski, across the St. Lawrence River from Baie Comeau.

The 1,000 employees of the Davie Shipbuilding Ltd. yards at Lauzon walked out today and primary and secondary schools in the Levis-Lauzon region and many schools at Sherbrooke, in the eastern townships, were closed by teacher walk-outs.

Other workers who joined the protest today included Montreal postal workers and 8,000 blue collar workers in the same city.

Radio stations have been occupied at various points around the province for brief periods.

In the northwest, CKRN Rouyn-Noranda was reported

B.C. Coal Royalty Loss Hit

By ROBERT OLVER
Times Staff

British Columbians are missing out on at least $1,250,000 yearly on unpaid coal royalties from Kaiser Resources coal mining, according to a fact sheet compiled by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Although that figure is not specifically mentioned in the fact sheet, Barrett claims that Kaiser has a contract to sell Japan five million tons of coal yearly at $18.65 per ton. This means an income to Kaiser of $95 million yearly.

The Coal Act provides for royalty — which Kaiser is exempted from — of 25 cents a ton or $1,250,000 yearly.

Barrett charges that the 25 cents a ton rate is applied on coal mined on what is called crown-leased land. This means, he said, that coal mined on land that was crown-granted — as is the case with Kaiser — no royalties are charged.

'EXPORTING COAL'

Referring to a 1970 Price Waterhouse report on the B.C. mining industry, which shows that Kaiser Resources Ltd. is 75 per cent foreign-owned (Kaiser Steel interests in the United States) Barrett added: "We therefore have an interesting picture of a U.S. company exploiting our coal, paying no royalty, then selling the coal to create employment in secondary industry in Japan. An excellent sample of Socid Credit planning."

Barrett has advocated a royalty of $1 a ton on all coal mined in B.C.

Mines Minister Frank Richter replied Thursday: "Mr. Barrett has some points but his figures are a little out."

Richter said the B.C. government had once tried to collect royalties from Kaiser but was overruled by the Supreme Court of Canada on the basis that crown-granted land was exempt from royalties.

"The alternative was to impose a mining tax of 11 cents a ton which is still in excess of what the NDP government in Saskatchewan charges under their legislation."

He also contended that Barrett's proposed $1 a ton royalty would a crippling charge for Kaiser.

According to Richter: "Kaiser dropped $13 million in 1971 and a further $3 million in the last quarter. The $1 royalty might be fine if they could afford to pay but if it runs them out of the country there is no point to it."

Reds Win Blasted An Loc But Flee Bombed Hanoi

TIMES NEWS SERVICES

Red troops today bombarded the city of An Loc, 80 miles from Saigon, with a record 10,000 rounds of artillery and rocket fire — almost completely resting control of the devastated city from the South Vietnamese.

A see-saw struggle for An Loc has raged for the past two days.

Meanwhile, withering U.S. bomber attacks on Hanoi have caused North Vietnamese officials to order the evacuation of that city, according to diplomatic sources in Saigon.

David Jackson, head of the Canadian delegation to the International Control Commission, estimates that more than half of the more than one million residents have been removed from the North Vietnamese capital.

And, Radio Hanoi today reported that U.S. bombs have pounded the city's business district, cut a dike that protects one part of the capital from flood waters on the Red River and severly damaged a highway leading to the airport.

Within the past 48 hours, what is left of the wide-boulevarded city of An Loc, has become a symbolic struggle for both sides — although its importance is not as great as the strategic central highlands battles.

One glimmer of hope in the bleak picture came from Paris today with a statement from the U.S. that it is ready to resume the peace talks which were suspended, May 4.

The U.S. delegation, however, criticized the Communists for "poisoning the atmosphere" of the sessions.

In other battle sites, the U.S. has imposed a news blackout on the U.S. naval blockade of the key port of Haiphong and six other cities.

NEWS BRIEFS

More Civic Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract talks between striking lower mainland civic workers and the Municipal Labor Relations Bureau were to continue today, spokesmen for both sides said Thursday. Neither side would comment on the progress of the talks or whether agreement on a new contract is near.

Copter Missing

PORT HARDY (CP) — A helicopter owned by a Howard Hughes company and carrying three persons went missing Thursday night on a short flight to this remote community on the northeastern tip of Vancouver Island.

Landslide Vote

DUBLIN — The Irish Republic has voted overwhelmingly to join the Common Market, approving entry by a margin of five to one. The outcome of Wednesday's poll, counted Thursday, came as no surprise but the size of the massive margin was. Prime Minister Jack Lynch told reporters it "demonstrates the political realism of the Irish people."

No Survivors

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter)—Navy officers who today boarded the smouldering hulk of the British freighter Royston Grange said they found no survivors among the ship's 94 passengers and crew. It had collided with a tanker in the River Plate.

U.K. Rail Shut

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's state-run Railways Board today ordered a 32-hour nationwide rail shutdown this weekend. It will leave the country without any trains from Saturday evening until Monday morning.

The board took the drastic action after Britain's 230,000 railroad workers crippled services for the second time in 18 days with a go-slow and ban on overtime work.

The three railroad unions ordered the slowdown to back a pay hike demand which the railways board and the government rejected as "inflationary."

The board announced there will be no trains at all from 10 p.m. Saturday until 6 a.m. Monday.

The new go-slow, which began at midnight Thursday, hit hard into rail services.

Commuter trains into London were hit worst. On the commuter network from London's southern suburbs more than 600 trains were cancelled. Only 232 ran.

Cuts were almost as severe on other commuter networks.

But officials said tens of thousands of workers apparently decided not to battle for places in the few trains still running and simply stayed home.

Rose Trial Jury Hung

MONTREAL (CP) — While spectators cheered and applauded, Jacques Rose was left speechless Thursday when the 12-man jury at his kidnap trial declared it was unable to reach a unanimous verdict after deliberating for 15 hours.

Rose, a 25-year-old former mechanic, was charged with kidnapping Pierre Laporte Oct. 10, 1970. The Quebec labor minister was found strangled a week later.

It was the first hung jury since the trials connected with the October, 1970, kidnap-slaying crisis began in early 1971. A unanimous verdict of guilty was given in all the other trials.

Spectators, mostly friends of Rose and his family, broke out in loud cheers, chanting and joyful tears when the jury foreman told Mr. Justice Eugene Marquis of Court of Queen's Bench there was no chance of reaching a unanimous decision.

"This shows the system is not all bad," the judge said as he put the case over to June 19. Quebec Justice Minister Jeorme Choquette, the attorney-general, must decide whether to institute a new trial or drop the charge.

Clenching his fist in a salute, answered by one of the jurors, Rose was led out of the courtroom less than 15 minutes after entering.

Defence lawyer Robert Lemieux said he will present a request for bail as soon as possible. His client still faces a charge of murder.

Provincial police guards and plainclothes officers in the court made no attempt to control about 50 persons chanting "Ce n'est qu'un debut, continuons le combat" —It's only a beginning, let's continue the fight.

Unions 'Face Suicide'

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec labor unions are being led down a suicidal road by radical strategists whose aim is to wreck the present system, says a veteran industrial relations expert.

Abbe Gerard Dion, 59, professor of industrial relations at Laval University and long-time social reformer, sees anarchist tendencies coming from the left and right of Quebec's volatile political spectrum.

The priest-professor-editor said in an interview Thursday certain union strategists bluntly espouse destruction of the system, "apparently not thinking that the result of what they want would finish them."

"They speak of political systems and social systems but they forget that unions are also part of the system," said Father Dion, referring to union security clauses protected by legislation in the North American pattern of industrial relations.

The interview assumed unusual realism when the tide of unrest flowed, figuratively speaking, to the very doorstep of Father Dion's office on the Laval campus. Noisy but good humored activists, fresh from a meeting, went from door to door demanding that the building be cleared—but the professor sat tight and his secretary pointed out to the visitors that she had not been invited to the meeting.

REACTION TO JAILING

This was a mild manifestation of reaction in various parts of Quebec to the jailing on contempt-of-court convictions of Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, and Roger Charbonneau, president of the Quebec Teachers' Corp.

Father Dion said he sees the jailings as part of a "scenario" or pattern emerging ever since the three big union federations linked in a common front last year.

The three leaders wanted the "halo of martyrdom and they got it," said Father Dion, adding the prediction that they will appeal at a judicious time.

ALL MINERS DEAD

Times News Services

KELLOGG, Idaho — The last of 91 bodies was found by rescue teams as they completed combing the underground tunnels of the Sunshine silver mine here.

Teams found 44 bodies Thursday. Another 108 of the original 201 working in the mile-deep mine got out quickly when fire struck May 2.

Two miners — Ron Flory, 28, and Tom Wilkinson, 29, were found alive one week after the fire.

Several inquiries are under way into mine safety precautions and cause of the fire, which started somewhere between the 3,100 and 3,700-foot levels.

'Why Did They Do It?'

BELFAST (UPI) — Mrs. Pauline Hyland sat in her small terraced home Thursday and wept.

"Why have they done this to my little girl?" she asked. "She's a good girl. She never harmed anybody."

Her 15-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, lay in a hospital bed half a mile away, the victim of an Irish Republican Army punishment squad. (See also Page 2.)

"I know nothing of these things they say she did," Mrs. Hyland said. "But I know Elizabeth would never take drugs for money from the police."

Elizabeth, her blonde hair shorn and doused with tar and feathers, was taken to hospital Wednesday after her public humiliation at the hands of the official wing of the outlawed IRA.

The IRA accused her of being a member of a police spy ring, of taking drugs and money in return for information.

A crowd of 200 watched her punishment at Theodore Street in the Roman Catholic Lower Falls Road area, just a few yards from where her ailing mother was recovering from an operation.

Mrs. Hyland, the mother of six, received a second blow as she sat sobbing in her home.

Her 19-year-old daughter Alice revealed that she, too, had been tarred and feathered a week ago.

"I didn't want to tell mother because she isn't well," Alice said, "but now she might as well know."

Alice said she was seized by a group of men who told her they were official IRA. They poured tar and feathers over her, but did not shave her head. She was admitted to hospital last Friday.

"I told my mother it was for my nerves," Alice said.

From her hospital bed Elizabeth said her recollection of what had happened was hazy.

"I was blindfolded and taken from my home Friday by a number of men and girls. They kept moving me from house to house and I never knew where I was," she said.

"I don't know how people can be so cruel," said Mrs. Hyland, who is due back in hospital next week for another operation. "We try to live without harming anyone — why can't they leave us alone?"

Mrs. Hyland said she was horrified that her Catholic neighbors in the Lower Falls had just looked on.

"There was no one, no one at all to help my girl," she said.

CHURCHILL WAS 'MENACE'

LONDON (AP) — Lord Wigg, a former government minister, says Sir Winston Churchill was "a national menace" whose policies hastened Britain's decline as a world power.

A member of former prime minister Harold Wilson's Labor government, Lord Wigg told reporters that "the sooner Britain exorcises the romanticism of the Churchill years the better it will be for the country."

Log Supply Enough for Month

B.C. Forest Products will have sufficient logs to keep its three Victoria mills in operation into next month, senior manager Walter Nelson said today.

He said the company still has some fallers working but how long the mills can operate "depends if they continue to work."

The two sawmills and plywood mill, off Gorge Road, employ close to 1,000 persons.

In the Alberni Valley, notices have appeared at two mills warning of a closure because of log shortages. The mills are Alberni Pacific division and Somass A mill of MacMillan Bloedel and the notices said they will have to close May 31.

Somass B mill and a connecting shingle mill could close June 15, said a company spokesman.

Some 400 employees would be involved at Alberni Pacific and 420 at Somass.

In Vancouver, Mr. Justice Victor Dryer of the B.C. Supreme Court said Thursday the main issue to be decided in MacMillan Bloedel's action against 34 fallers is whether the fallers' decision not to work April 18 was made as a group or on an individual basis.

He made the remark as counsel for both sides made final submissions at the conclusion of evidence.

The company alleges the fallers are guilty of contempt of court for allegedly disobeying a Jan. 21 injunction prohibiting concerted slowdowns and illegal work stoppages at its Franklin River operation.

It alleges the Franklin River fallers did not go into the woods April 18 in a concerted effort to force the company to accelerate negotiations with the International Woodworkers of American on a pricing formula for fallers.

The fallers agree that no work was done April 18 but deny they acted in concert. They contend that decisions not to work were made as individuals and thus did not violate the inunction.

Court was told that a group of fallers on their way to the Franklin River camp were flagged down by two persons who pointed to a sign saying "Fallers only. Emergency meeting re Nemetz report 9 a.m." (Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz settled a forest industry contract dispute two years ago.)

The fallers left their bus to investigate and returned to Port Alberni to discover there was no meeting. Fallers living in camp also heard about the sign and did not work.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister James Chabot was meeting the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations separately today in Vancouver to discuss contract talks.

FIR, representing more than 100 timber companies in the coast area, has said meaningful discussions cannot occur until 800 fallers return to their jobs.

The fallers have stopped work in a dispute over new pricing formulas, which were to have been worked out following the 1970 coast industry contract settlement.

A spokesman for wildcatting timber fallers said Thursday top earners are prepared to take wage cuts up to $50 a day in order to win a standard coast-wide pricing formula.

"There is no question about it, some of the camps, where the big money is, are going to lose that much," he said.

"But all the fallers have agreed to this . . . just so we can get a written standard agreement."

The spokesman declined to be identified because of court injunctions against the fallers.

Forest industrial relations, the industry agent, has said the fallers don't only want to revise upward their existing pricing formula, "but increase wages by 10 to 50 per cent beyond that."

WORKING-UP TRIALS for the 1972 Swiftsure begin this weekend for the navy's 91-foot Bermuda ketch, largest yacht in the race. Beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday, the colorful campaigner will be going through her paces in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, manned by volunteers from the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. Next week her crew will start a full week of training, ending the day before the race, which begins 9:30 a.m. Saturday, May 27, off Brotchie Ledge. A record fleet of 220 boats is expected to compete in the annual classic. (Jim McVie photo.)

Praise in the Night Is Better Than None

If there's a corner of heaven set aside for good writers — and there really ought to be — I fancy that Ralph Allen will be there and that he'll be proud and pleased at what's going on in Oxbow, Saskatchewan.

Ralph was a modest, self-effacing man and, indeed, had no cause to appear otherwise since his accomplishments and reputation as an editor, writer and historian were recognized early in his career. At the time of his death six years ago no other Canadian in his craft was as respected and loved by his fellows.

Yet, modest or not, every writer is fortified by praise — needs it in his lonely craft — and I have been remembering the night when I had a hand in that.

What's happening in Oxbow, to get to that first, is that the editor of the weekly Oxbow Herald, Patrick Armstrong, has purchased the railway station there and will make it a museum in memory of Ralph. Come July the CPR will be barrelling right through Oxbow without a stop and so the old station-residence, where Ralph's father, Glen, was agent, and where Ralph spent his boyhood, came up for sale. Editor Armstrong got it for $200. Various memorabilia from Ralph's career will be on view.

The news item on this pleasing event sent my mind back to the time, immediately after the war, when Ralph's first novel, "Home Made Banners," was published and became an over night flop. It was and is a fine story, beautifully written, but Canadians then had had a bellyfull of war. The book was never to earn the sales or the recognition that it richly deserved.

★ ★ ★

Its failure to penetrate or even near the best-seller lists obviously weighed on Ralph's mind when he came to Vancouver to help with the customary promotion.

"Come to the autographing session tonight," he said, wryly, when I'd picked him up at the airport, "if you can fight your way through the crowds of three or four people I'm attracting."

When I said that I thought "Home Made Banners" a classic of its kind he was not mollified. "The only way this book will be remembered," he said, oozing gloom, "is if someone manages to engrave it on the head of a pin."

I volunteered to help him drown his sorrows that night after the autographing business at Duthie's, said I'd phone him at his hotel when I'd finished my newspaper chores and we parted.

I had an interview scheduled in the late afternoon with Jimmy Durante, who was then appearing at the Pacific Exhibition, went to the Hotel Vancouver, had a hilarious hour of chat with the great man, then went back to the office and wrote my story. Durante had suggested I join him later to see Frankie Laine's early show at the Cave. We rendezvoused there.

Frankie Laine came to our table after his performance and he and Durante and the others in our party decided they would move on to the Palomar Supper Club to hear the great swinging band of Sandy DeSantis. I phoned Ralph to join us there and said I would make arrangements with the doorman.

"I'm in no mood to be ebullient, Ralph said, "but I'll come anyway." I had never heard him so doleful.

I was very, very busy for the next half hour. I spoke to Frankie Laine and Jimmy Durante in the cab. I spoke with the Palomar doorman. I spoke with DeSantis and with Ethel Lang, his statuesque platinum blond singer and, backstage, with the creamy young ladies of the chorus in the Palomar show.

★ ★ ★

When Ralph joined our party of a dozen or more at the supper club he seemed in a daze. He bent down and whispered in my ear, "When I gave the doorman my name he told me that Home Made Banners was the best book he'd ever read. What do you make of that?"

"Just what it deserves," I assured him and, standing, introduced him to the others.

"Not the writin' Ralph Allen?" Durante wheezed, registering, entirely with his nose, wonderment and incredulity. "Man, oh, man, that Home Made Banners! That's some book!"

"Couldn't put it down," exclaimed Frankie Laine, the man with the brass lungs, a man who never in his life had read anything but the Daily Racing Form. "Sit down right here, Ralph. We're gonna drink to that!"

Murmurs of praise passed about the table as DeSantis, the gorgeous Miss Lang and a covey of chorus girls approached our table. They each bore slips of paper. They ignored Durante and Laine and clamored for Ralph's autograph.

"It's an honor, sir, to have you in our club," DeSantis beamed. He bounded back to the microphone. "A round of applause, ladies and gentlemen, for Mr. Ralph Allen, the famous novelist! Take a bow, Mr. Allen!"

Ralph stood up, smiling his lob-sided smile, and graciously accepted the plaudits of the people of the night. Now the big DeSantis band went into action and as the dancers came by our table every speculating eye was on Ralph. They might not remember it in the morning, but they were seeing the making of a literary legend.

The hangovers next day when I drove him to the airport were of truly monumental dimensions. Ralph spoke not a word about the night before until we reached the departure gate. Then he gravely shook my hand and grinned.

"If I live," he said, "I'll do the same for you one day."

Crisis Line Given Grant

Victoria's telephone crisis line — NEED — will receive a $2,500 grant from the B.C. government's drug abuse fund, Education Minister Donald Brothers announced today.

Brothers, who is chairman of the drugs, alcohol and tobacco abuse council which administers the fund, said the latest grant would bring to $10,000 the amount awarded by B.C. to the organization. NEED was one year old on Wednesday.

The Crisis Line has more than 100 trained volunteers answering distress calls on a 24-hour basis. It does not ask the name of callers. To date it has handled about 7,000 calls.

In recent days the organization has been on the verge of folding for lack of funds. It takes $2,000 a month to meet its expenses.

★ ★ ★

Co-ordinator Dave Steward was elated with the news today.

"It's very timely," he said. "It'll help us go for awhile longer while we try to find more fundamental financing."

Stewart is NEED's only full-time staff member. A former psychology student, he has a part-time assistant and a part-time secretary on salary. NEED's other major bills are for rent, phones, heat and light and office supplies.

The provincial government awarded the organization a $7,500 grant in November. Other help has come from the federal government, local service clubs and individuals.

Since last October the province has warded $253,017 to 39 groups working with various aspects of problems relating to the non-medical use of drugs and alcoholism.

District Aims Study Slated

A citizens' committee to examine the industrial and commercial development needs of Saanich is expected to hold its first meeting within three weeks.

The ad hoc group created at the suggestion of Mayor Hugh Curtis in his inaugural speech in January, will select its chairman from among seven persons representing the community.

They will have the technical assistance of the municipal planning department, which has drafted a set of proposed terms of reference.

Planner Tom Loney said it was co-incidental that the department had just launched a commercial-industrial study of Saanich and he expected the new committee will be "a great assistance to our study."

Curtis said the committee would determine its own approach to problems and set a timetable for completing the study, which will look into general commercial and light industrial or service requirements and locations.

The object is to co-ordinate such development with other forms of zoning and land use in the municipality and to broaden the property tax base.

One of the areas to be examined could be the way industry is shifting away from traditional concepts which in some cases have confined the choice of locations.

In any event, it was thought deliberations would all be done in a regional context.

Exting commercial and developed land in the municipality likely will be broken down into particular useages and examined with vacant land or potentially commercial-industrial land.

Among the members are Saanich Advisory Planning Commission chairman Gordon Denford, architect Alan Lester and Saanich coundil planning committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring. The planning commission is entitled to one more member and the Saanich Chamber of Commerce may delegate three.

Shhhhhh... Entering Saanich

A general ban on nuisance noise by people, vehicles and farm, domestic and wild animals is proposed in the draft form of the first Saanich noise suppression bylaw.

The subject of noise control has been under discussion for more than a year and was brought to a head last fall as study was made of other jurisdictions and proposals were made within Saanich.

Aldermen have been given the draft bylaw for study prior to further consideration by council's legislative committee this month.

Some aspects of the bylaw are already covered in existing legislation, for example, the municipal Animals Bylaw, the B.C. Motor Vehicles Act and the Criminal Code.

The new bylaw brings them under one legislative umbrella, making enforcement easier and providing for uniform penalties.

Proposed penalties upon conviction for noise-making in Saanich range from $25 to $300 for a first offence and $50 to $500 for second and subsequent offences.

Each day of an alleged violation constitutes an offence under the proposal.

The proliferation of noise was cited by Mayor Hugh Curtis in his opening speech this year, which said:

"Without interfering with reasonable individual rights, the trend towarda noiser environment must be reversed."

Notice of the intention to introduce such a law was supported by the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society last year.

Unlike some pollution control laws there are no technical criteria written in, although these could be added later. They might include such factors as decibel measurement of noise within a prescribed range and distance from source.

The bylaw declares no person may shout, use a megaphone or make other noise in or on a street, wharf, dock, steamboat-landing, railway station or other public place "which disturbs or tends to disturb the quiet, peace, rest, enjoyment, comfort or convenience of the neighborhood or of persons in the vincinity thereof."

There is a long list of suggested exceptions, including police, fire and ambulance warnings; marching bands in authorized parades; reasonable use of amplifier systems for voice or music in parks and squares for public gatherings; warnings by vehicles, boats and trains to avert danger, and church bells and chimes.

There is also provision to exclude the erection or demolition of buildings between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m., except Sunday or in an emergency, or other essential work of an emergency nature where the health, safety and welfare of the community may be at stake.

Welfare Cost Split Unchanged: WAC

There will be no reduction in the share of welfare costs paid by British Columbia's municipalities, Premier Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett made the statement after Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said earlier that he was "forcibly and actively" considering such a reduction.

Upon his return to Victoria Thursday afternoon after a week in Kelowna and Vancouver, the Premier firmly squashed the idea of a reduction when asked about Gaglardi's statements by reporters.

"The answer is no," Bennett said quickly.

He added that "I don't want to mislead anybody" into thinking such a reduction is possible.

Gaglardi made his statement about a possible reduction of the 15 per cent municipal share following a flood of letters from the province's mayors.

Socred MLA Alex Fraser started the letter campaign and predicted Thursday the government would act on the matter within 30 days.

NONSUCH SAILS AGAIN

Like a stately ghost from the past, the full-size replica of the 54-foot ketch Nonsuch, the ship whose 17th century fur-trading voyage gave birth to the Hudson's Bay Co., will sail into the Inner Harbor a week today.

She is expected to tie up at 10:30 a.m. and will be in Victoria until May 29.

On hand for her arrival will be George Richardson, governor of the company; Mrs. Richardson and Lord Amory, former company governor.

During her time alongside, the Nonsuch will be open to the public each evening from 7 to 9 p.m. and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

★ ★ ★

Built over a 10-month period in a Devonshire shipyard, the replica is a faithful re-incarnation of the ship whose 1668-1669 voyage opened up the fur trade of western Canada.

Her hull is of solid English oak and her 37-foot keel, elm. Isle of Wight artist Jack Whitehead painstakingly carved her lion masks, two life-sized crouching dogs and the magnificent carvings on her stern — two small cupids focussed in a setting of foliage and female figures.

Her 2,000 square feet of canvas sails, like her predecessor's have hand-sewen eyelets and are operated by miles of hemp rope.

Her cramped crew quarters bear witness to the spartan life of 17th century sailors.

★ ★ ★

Built at a cost of $175,000 to mark The Bay's 300th anniversary, the Nonsuch replica arrived in Canada in April, 1970, having crossed the Atlantic on the deck of the SS Bristol City.

After crossing Canada by flatcar, she was refitted in Seattle this winter.

She will spend the summer visiting ports on this coast.

Summer over, she will be taken overland again to her final 'homeport' in Winnipeg, where she will be exhibited, all sails flying, at the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

Landfill Effluent Stopped

A spokesman said today the Pollution Control Branch is satisified effluent running into Millstream Creek from a Langford landfill operation has been stopped.

A complaint about a month ago claimed Millstream Landfill, which dumps wood waste and construction refuse at 2015 Millstream, was producing a pollution problem in the creek.

The firm operates under a permit from the Pollution Control Branch. James McCrossan of the branch said the situation has been examined and the provincial agency is satisfied the problem has been remedied.

A. The Skeena Prince was built in Vancouver in 1946 and has a gross tonnage of 1,469 tons. She was originally named the Blue Peter II; later, when owned by Union Steamships, she was called the Cassiar. The Island Prince was built in Norway in 1929 and has a gross tonnage of 1,791 tons. Her former name was the Hugh Arianne.

You Can Take a 25% Air-Fare Gamble

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

There seems to be a special air fare for everybody these days — everybody else, that is.

If you're very young or old you can get half fare on standby basis. If you want to travel overseas there are always charters.

But, if you're the average type and you want to visit ailing Aunt Martha in Toronto or see Montreal during your summer holidays — well, it's going to cost. There are no special fares.

There is one exception. A little known publicized arrangement by which air fares are reduced 25 per cent for anybody travelling in Canada.

But there are a number of jokers in the deal. The 25 per cent reduction is open only to those who order and pay for their ticket two full months in advance of their flying date.

The more important stumbling block is that the special rate is not available during the summer holidays or during long weekends or any other time when there is likely to be heavy volume traffic.

Further, if you buy the ticket and pay for it and then find you have to cancel, you must forfeit 25 per cent of what you paid, unlike other air tickets which are refunded in full.

In short, the special rate is there but it takes special circumstances to be able to take advantage of it.

And the airlines do not promote the 25-per-cent-off special rate. They want to fill their planes with the 100 per cent customers if they can.

Claude Taylor of Montreal, a vice-president of Air Canada, was taken to task about the lack of special rates for the average traveller during his visit here for the convention of the Travel Industry Association of Canada.

He admitted the airline industry has come under considerable criticism over domestic air rates but said it would not be economically feasible to reduce fares across the board as airlines were earning a low percentage on investment compared with other industries.

As for standby rates for everyone? No way!

He said it is true that sometimes regularly scheduled flights take off with empty seats that could be filled with standby fares.

But if standby fares were available to everyone, flights would be empty right up to takeoff time. Everyone in the airport would be on standby.

The airlines are stydying the fare level and considering some kind of revision but the universal standby plan is not among feasible options.

The 25 per cent reduction is there for those who can make use of it. As for others, for the time being they will have to continue paying the full shot.

LONG-RANGE PLANNING THEIR GOAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new institute for research on public policy will concentrate on long range planning, Ronald S. Ritchie, its provisional director, told a Conference Board in Canada seminar Thursday.

Ritchie, who is also vice-president of Imperial Oil Co. Ltd., said the government must be equipped to deal with complex tasks.

"Whereas most policy research groups attached to government departments find it difficult for long to focus their attention on horizons beyond the next election, the new institute will concentrate on doing so," he said.

"The areas it will choose to study will ordinarily be those in which one can foresee policy issues five to 10 years hence."

In the current situation, he said, governments may work at cross purposes, battling unemployment but creating inflation or handicapping enterprise in one region through subsidized competition while trying to correct disparities in another region.

Earlier Senator Douglas Everett suggested formation of a federal-provincial "stabilization council" that would serve as a watchdog on inflationary wage and price increases, submitting recommendations to government on action "to bring such increases back to reasonable levels."

Everett said the council could meet annually with business and labor leaders to determine short-term economic goals and for price levels objectives.

Wages and prices would be reviewed in reference to the price level goal and "those that are badly out of line would be publicly reported to the government," said the Manitoba Liberal.

Creation of such a council "when combined with sound, long-term planning" would result in a "growing, stable high employment economy."

U.S. Needs Help Bankers Told

MONTREAL (CP) — United States spokesmen used an international bankers conference here Thursday to repeat "again, again and again" that other countries will have to co-operate to help the U.S. out of its balance-of-payments problems.

The sessions of the International Monetary Conference are closed but Gabriel Hauge, chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., told a news conference U.S. spokesmen made the point any time anyone was willing to listen.

Hauge said there were no major differences during discussion, but the main problem was how to reform world trade patterns.

"The U.S. said again, again and again that it has to do better in trade and in its current account.

"The question then arises of which countries are going to do less or worse to help the U.S. generate these different results."

NOT SINGLED OUT

Canada was not mentioned specifically but is one of the countries running a surplus in business with the U.S. Talks on a new trade agreement between the U.S. and Canada are stalled and there is no firm indication when negotiations will resume. Canada's postion is that the U.S. is demanding too much.

"The U.S. is no longer the giant of the economic world," Hauge said. "But have others accepted that?"

He said the discussion was a general review of issues of monetary reform and trade that had been discussed earlier during the conference which opened Tuesday and ends today.

He said the majority opinion appeared to be that the world will continue to work on a system of fixed par values for currencies, but with more flexibility involved. This would include more-frequent but smaller value changes.

DEPENDS ON BARGAINING

"But the extent of this flexibility still has to be negotiated," he said.

The conference also discussed the possibility of a single currency in the European Common Market. He said there was some caution expressed but a general welcoming of the concept because it would bring "greater cohesion" in monetary matters.

Inflation was a topic under review earlier in the day, with speakers from the 20 nations represented outlining the problems of their own countries. Few ideas on how to control inflation came forward.

Sir Alex Cairncross of St. Peter's College, Oxford, commented: "If we knew how to control inflation, we wouldn't be so occupied with exchange rates."

European speakers were reported "pessimistic that inflation could be brought under control and kept there."

Anybody can make a truck small. That's not the problem. The secret is building a truck that's just exactly small enough. Big enough to do the job, and then some. Small enough to do it economically. That's what's made the Datsun North America's number one selling small truck.
For eleven years, we've been learning about exactly what America wants in a small truck. And we've been delivering it. The Datsun Pickup has an overhead cam engine powerful enough for highway speeds and back road hauling, small enough for maximum economy.
The big six-foot all-steel load box is just the right size for 9 out of 10 small truck owners. The 1,400-pound gross load capacity is perfect for almost everyone's needs, from recreation to heavy labor.
Is it any wonder Datsun is North America's number one selling small truck?

VOTE COST CURB EYED

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday night the government will introduce a bill shortly limiting campaign expenditures and requiring "the state to pay at least part of the bill of election expenses."

The bill was approved by the cabinet Thursday morning, he told a public meeting at an east-end high school on the first day of a two-day visit to southern Ontario.

Asked if the bill will be passed before the next federal election, expected this year, Mr. Trudeau replied "that depends when the election will be."

It was announced later in Ottawa that the bill is expected to be introduced Tuesday.

Ottawa officials said the bill would set up a system of examining expenditures and reporting on them and also require candidates to disclose — in part — the source of funds used to promote their election.

Montreal demonstrators on way to occupy radio station

QUEBEC (CP) — Industrial and government facilities, schools, hospitals, newspapers and radio stations were hit again today in Quebec, fourth day of a groundswell of labor unrest that began with imprisonment of three top provincial union leaders Tuesday.

Reports of new walkouts and demonstrations poured in hourly from widely separated areas of the province.

The first death linked directly to the turmoil was reported today. A man struck by a car Wednesday during a demonstration has died in Sept-Iles, 30 miles north of Quebec City.

The situation was described as a "crisis" by one of two Quebec cabinet ministers who said they had withdrawn their resignations from Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa's cabinet because of the labor trouble.

The planned resignations had been linked to other matters involving constitutional dealings with the federal government.

Claude Castonguay, social affairs minister, said Thursday night he was staying on "principally because of the crisis we are living through."

Jean-Paul L'Allier, civil service minister and the man at the centre of the storm in contract negotiations between the government and 250,000 public service workers, announced in a statement early today he will continue in the cabinet to help find a solution to the current unrest.

Montreal was without any of its six daily newspapers today after walkouts by various employees of the city's four French-language dailies and the two English-language ones.

Elsewhere, L'Action did not publish today at Quebec City and the provincial capital's other French-language daily, Le Soleil, was experiencing a walkout of some employees.

On the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where demonstrators took over Sept-Iles earlier this week until police reinforcements were flown in by Canadian Armed Forces aircraft, there were reports of new walkouts overnight and today by miners, construction workers and teachers at Sept-Iles, Baie Comeau and Hauterive.

Firebombs were thrown at one metals company plant in Baie Comeau overnight and at a garage door on the property of Municipal Affairs Minister Maurice Tessier in Rimouski, across the St. Lawrence River from Baie Comeau.

The 1,000 employees of the Davie Shipbuilding Ltd. yards at Lauzon walked out today and primary and secondary schools in the Levis-Lauzon region and many schools at Sherbrooke, in the eastern townships, were closed by teacher walk-outs.

Other workers who joined the protest today included Montreal postal workers and 8,000 blue collar workers in the same city.

Radio stations have been occupied at various points around the province for brief periods.

In the northwest, CKRN Rouyn-Noranda was reported

Unions 'Face Suicide'

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec labor unions are being led down a suicidal road by radical strategists whose aim is to wreck the present system, says a veteran industrial relations expert.

Abbe Gerard Dion, 59, professor of industrial relations at Laval University, and long-time social reformer, sees anarchist tendencies coming from the left and right of Quebec's volatile political spectrum.

The priest-professor-editor said in an interview Thursday certain union strategists bluntly espouse destruction of the system, "apparently not thinking that the result of what they want would finish them."

"They speak of political systems and social systems but they forget that unions are also part of the system," said Father Dion, referring to union security clauses protected by legislation in the North American pattern of industrial relations.

The interview assumed unusual realism when the tide of unrest flowed, figuratively speaking, to the very doorstep of Father Dion's office on the Laval campus. Noisy but good humored activists, fresh from a meeting, went from door to door demanding that the building be cleared—but the professor sat tight and his secretary pointed out to the visitors that she had not been invited to the meeting.

REACTION TO JAILING

This was a mild manifestation of reaction in various parts of Quebec to the jailing on contempt-of-court convictions of Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, and Roger Charbonneau, president of the Quebec Teachers' Corp.

Father Dion said he sees the jailings as part of a "scenario" or pattern emerging ever since the three big union federations linked in a common front last year.

The three leaders wanted the "halo of martyrdom and they got it," said Father Dion, adding the prediction that they will appeal at a judicious time.

B.C. Coal Royalty Loss Hit

By ROBERT OLVER
Times Staff

British Columbians are missing out on at least $1,250,000 yearly on unpaid coal royalties from Kaiser Resources coal mining, according to a fact sheet compiled by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Although that figure is not specifically mentioned in the fact sheet, Barrett claims that Kaiser has a contract to sell Japan five million tons of coal yearly at $18.65 per ton. This means an income to Kaiser of $95 million yearly.

The Coal Act provides for royalty — which Kaiser is exempted from — of 25 cents a ton or $1,250,000 yearly.

Barrett charges that the 25 cents a ton rate is applied on coal mined on what is called crown-leased land. This means, he said, that coal mined on land that was crown-granted — as is the case with Kaiser — no royalties are charged.

'EXPORTING COAL'

Referring to a 1970 Price Waterhouse report on the B.C. mining industry, which shows that Kaiser Resources Ltd. is 75 per cent foreign-owned (Kaiser Steel interests in the United States) Barrett added: "We therefore have an interesting picture of a U.S. company exploiting our coal, paying no royalty, then selling the coal to create employment in secondary industry in Japan. An excellent sample of Social Credit planning."

Barrett has advocated a royalty of $1 a ton on all coal mined in B.C.

Mines Minister Frank Richter replied Thursday: "Mr. Barrett has some points but his figures are a little out."

Richter said the B.C. government had once tried to collect royalties from Kaiser but was overruled by the Supreme Court of Canada on the basis that crown-granted land was exempt from royalties.

"The alternative was to impose a mining tax of 11 cents a ton which is still in excess of what the NDP government in Saskatchewan charges under their legislation."

He also contended that Barrett's proposed $1 a ton royalty would be a crippling charge for Kaiser.

According to Richter: "Kaiser dropped $13 million in 1971 and a further $3 million in the last quarter. The $1 royalty might be fine if they could afford to pay but if it runs them out of the country there is no point to it."

Reds Win Blasted An Loc But Flee Bombed Hanoi

Times News Services

Red troops today bombarded the city of An Loc, 80 miles from Saigon, with a record 10,000 rounds of artillery and rocket fire — almost completely resting control of the devastated city from the South Vietnamese.

A see-saw struggle for An Loc has raged for the past two days.

Meanwhile, withering U.S. bomber attacks on Hanoi have caused North Vietnamese officials to order the evacuation of that city, according to diplomatic sources in Saigon.

David Jackson, head of the Canadian delegation to the International Control Commission, estimates that more than half of the more than one million residents have been removed from the North Vietnamese capital.

And, Radio Hanoi today reported that U.S. bombs have pounded the city's business district, cut a dike that protects one part of the capital from flood waters on the Red River and severly damaged a highway leading to the airport.

Within the past 48 hours, what is left of the wide-boulevarded city of An Loc, has become a symbolic struggle for both sides — although its importance is not as great as the strategic central highlands battles.

One glimmer of hope in the bleak picture came from Paris today with a statement from the U.S. that it is ready to resume the peace talks which were suspended May 4.

The U.S. delegation, however, criticized the Communists for "poisoning the atmosphere" of the sessions.

In other battle sites, the U.S. has imposed a news blackout on the U.S. naval blockade of the key port of Haiphong and six other cities.

U.K. Rail Shut

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's state-run Railways Board today ordered a 32-hour nationwide rail shutdown this weekend. It will leave the country without any trains from Saturday evening until Monday morning.

The board took the drastic action after Britain's 230,000 railroad workers crippled services for the second time in 18 days with a go-slow and ban on overtime work.

The three railroad unions ordered the slowdown to back a pay hike demand which the railways board and the government rejected as "inflationary."

The board announced there will be no trains at all from 10 p.m. Saturday until 6 a.m. Monday.

The new go-slow, which began at midnight Thursday, bit hard into rail services.

Commuter trains into London were hit worst. On the commuter network from London's southern suburbs more than 600 trains were cancelled. Only 232 ran.

Cuts were almost as severe on other commuter networks.

But officials said tens of thousands of workers apparently decided not to battle for places in the few trains still running and simply stayed home.

Rose Trial Jury Hung

MONTREAL (CP) — While spectators cheered and applauded, Jacques Rose was left speechless Thursday when the 12-man jury at his kidnap trial declared it was unable to reach a unanimous verdict after deliberating for 15 hours.

Rose, a 25-year-old former mechanic, was charged with kidnapping Pierre Laporte Oct. 10, 1970. The Quebec labor minister was found strangled a week later.

It was the first hung jury since the trials connected with the October, 1970, kidnap-slaying crisis began in early 1971. A unanimous verdict of guilty was given in all the other trials.

Spectators, mostly friends of Rose and his family, broke out in loud cheers, chanting and joyful tears when the jury foreman told Mr. Justice Eugene Marquis of Court of Queen's Bench there was no chance of reaching a unanimous decision.

"This shows the system is not all bad," the judge said as he put the case over to June 19. Quebec Justice Minister Jeorme Chequette, the attorney-general, must decide whether to institute a new trial or drop the charge.

Clenching his fist in a salute, answered by one of the jurors, Rose was led out of the courtroom less than 15 minutes after entering.

Defence lawyer Robert Lemieux said he will present a request for bail as soon as possible. His client still faces a charge of murder.

Provincial police guards and plainclothes officers in the court made no attempt to control about 50 persons chanting "Ce n'est qu'un debut, continuons le combat" —It's only a beginning, let's continue the fight.

'Why Did They...?'

BELFAST (UPI) — Mrs. Pauline Hyland sat in her small terraced home Thursday and wept.

"Why have they done this to my little girl?" she asked. "She's a good girl. She never harmed anybody."

Her 15-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, lay in a hospital bed half a mile away, the victim of an Irish Republican Army punishment squad. (See also Page 2.)

"I know nothing of these things they say she did," Mrs. Hyland said. "But I know Elizabeth would never take drugs for money from the police."

Elizabeth, her blonde hair shorn and doused with tar and feathers, was taken to hospital Wednesday after her public humiliation at the hands of the official wing of the outlawed IRA.

The IRA accused her of being a member of a police spy ring, of taking drugs and money in return for information.

A crowd of 200 watched her punishment at Theodore Street in the Roman Catholic Lower Falls Road area, just a few yards from where her ailing mother was recovering from an operation.

Mrs. Hyland, the mother of six, received a second blow as she sat sobbing in her home.

Her 19-year-old daughter Alice revealed that she, too, had been tarred and feathered a week ago.

"I didn't want to tell mother because she isn't well," Alice said, "but now she might as well know."

Alice said she was seized by a group of men who told her they were official IRA. They poured tar and feathers over her, but did not shave her head. She was admitted to hospital last Friday.

"I told my mother it was for my nerves," Alice said.

From her hospital bed Elizabeth said her recollection of what had happened was hazy.

"I was blindfolded and taken from my home Friday by a number of men and girls. They kept moving me from house to house and I never knew where I was," she said.

"I don't know how people can be so cruel," said Mrs. Hyland, who is due back in hospital next week for another operation. "We try to live without harming anyone — why can't they leave us alone?"

Mrs. Hyland said she was horrified that her Catholic neighbors in the Lower Falls had just looked on.

"There was no one, no one at all to help my girl," she said.

ALL MINERS DEAD

Times News Services

KELLOGG, Idaho — The last of 91 bodies was found by rescue teams as they completed combing the underground tunnels of the Sunshine silver mine here.

Teams found 44 bodies Thursday. Another 108 of the original 201 working in the mile-deep mine got out quickly when fire struck May 2.

Two miners — Ron Flory, 28, and Tom Wilkinson, 29, were found alive one week after the fire.

Several inquiries are under way into mine safety precautions and cause of the fire, which started somewhere between the 3,100 and 3,700-foot levels.

CHURCHILL WAS 'MENACE'

LONDON (AP) — Lord Wigg, a former government minister, says Sir Winston Churchill was "a national menace" whose policies hastened Britain's decline as a world power.

A member of former prime minister Harold Wilson's Labor government, Lord Wigg told reporters that "the sooner Britain exorcises the romanticism of the Churchill years the better it will be for the country."

Liberals Not Facing Facts In Budget, NDP Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal governments, like ancient monarchs, kill the messenger rather than accept the bad news, says Max Saltsman, New Democrat financial critic.

He told the Commons Thursday this is the attitude that leads Liberals to offer all kinds of excuses but never to face up to such facts as unemployment that has run about six per cent of the labor force for a year.

In the first day of full debate on Monday's budget, Mr. Saltsman said a recent assessment by Statistics Canada showed there had been no appreciable change in redistribution of income between the various levels of Canadian society between 1957 and 1967. This was despite all the vaunted programs on the subject produced by Conservative and Liberal governments in those 10 years.

He said Robert Kaplan (L—Toronto Don Valley), chairman of the finance committee, raised the issue when Statistics Canada officials were before the committee and was dissatisfied with the information.

Mr. Saltsman quoted Mr. Kaplan as saying that if true, it constituted "one of the most serious allegations" against government he had ever seen.

READS FROM RECORD

Reading from the committee record, he quoted Mr. Kaplan as saying; "I think it is very important for the credibility of Parliament . . . that there has been movement."

Mr. Saltsman said this was one of "the most pathetic statements made by a young man in search of justification for his policies."

When he couldn't stand the hard news, he blamed those gathering the statistics.

His speech set the tone for a day of criticism of government tax and spending programs for the year.

Marcel Lambert, Conservative financial critic, called the budget a hit-and-miss effort that took money away with one hand, gave it back with another, but still treated the country as a "whole forest of money trees" that could be harvested without limit.

Main thrust of the budget was a reduction in corporation income taxes in an effort to stimulate job-creating industrial expansion and increases in pensions for the elderly and disabled war veterans and their dependants.

The budget debate, which can go a maximum six days, provides a chance for motions of non-confidence in government policies.

MOVED MOTION

Conservatives and New Democrats quickly took the opportunity. Mr. Lambert moved one saying the government had failed to bring in adequate measures to relieve unemployment, provide incentives for Canadians to invest in their own economy and to provide personal income tax relief as an economic stimulant.

Mr. Saltsman added a subamendment saying the government should have reduced taxes for middle- and lower-income groups to replace the cuts given corporations.

Both criticized the government for not adopting a real industrial strategy.

Both also noted that the new tax bill, brought in late last year and applying for the first time this year, is going to produce about $1.2 billion more from direct taxation of individuals.

SALTSMAN
. . . sets tone

With direct corporate taxes being reduced by $60 million at the same time, Mr. Saltsman said, and with the bulk of Canada's industrial sector owned by foreigners, this amounted to the wage and salary earners of the country being forced to pay a fantastic subsidy that would benefit foreigners.

AMOUNTS TO BRIBE

This amounted to a straight bribe in an attempt to keep U.S.-owned subsidiaries in Canada from fleeing back across the border to take advantage of recent tax legislation giving breaks to U.S. corporations that sell abroad, Mr. Saltsman said.

Faced with the need to establish a policy on foreign ownership of Canadian industry, the Liberals had come up only with a policy "to bribe the hell out of them."

This wasn't the sort of policy a "self-respecting nation can live with."

Mr. Lambert said the budget speech of Finance Minister John Turner stressed that there were no tax changes for individuals. But, by default, the government was letting a three-per-cent reduction in personal income taxes, applying until the end of 1972, go by the boards.

This, coupled with the $1.2 billion increased collection in personal direct taxes, meant "it is monstrous" for the government to say personal taxes were not being touched.

NOT TRUE REFLECTION

Mr. Lambert said cost-of-living increases tied to pensions for the elderly and veterans don't truly reflect the price of inflation.

Because they are based on percentage increases in the consumer price index, and because each increase is taken from an ever-higher base figure, they do not meet actual increases in prices, Mr. Lambert argued.

He also suggested there should have been more incentive in the budget for Canadians to invest in their own economy. Americans still had better tax breaks in going for takeovers or expansion in Canada than Canadians.

Real Caouette, Social Credit leader, wondered why the government had said two years ago that it couldn't afford increased pension benefits and introduced them now.

"How can it be possible when we have more unemployment and the economy is shakier than ever?"

Mr. Caouette said it was a real joke to reduce the corporation tax, giving money to the powerful and expecting them to create jobs. This wouldn't improve the purchasing power of taxpayers, a step that should have been taken to improve the economic situation.

Today the House continues study of the bill to increase the old age pensions. It returns to the budget debate Monday.

Dollar's Rise in Value Called Threat to Trade

OTTAWA (CP)— Opposition MPs expressed anxiety Thursday that the rising value of the Canadian dollar will sour relations between Canadian exporters and their customers abroad.

The Canadian dollar cost $1.01 5-64 U.S. Thursday, its highest value since the government unpegged it from the fixed level of 92.5 U.S. cents June 1, 1970.

The rising value makes Canadian goods more costly — and harder to sell — to foreign buyers who must trade their currencies for Canadian dollars to purchase Canadian goods.

T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) blamed the rising rate on high interest rates in Canada, which tend to lure U.S. investors and increase demand for Canadian dollars.

However, Finance Minister John Turner said: "there are a number of other factors operating on the value of the Canadian dollar as well."

If steps are taken to change the situation, they will be announced in the Commons, he added.

In a reply to Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West), Mr. Turner indicated for the first time that the government operated a "dirty float" for the Canadian dollar during the international monetary crisis last fall.

USED FOR PROTECTION

He said the $485 million that the government used to buy U.S. dollars last year was spent during the last half of 1971, "when the world money market was in a state of disorder and we felt we had to protect the dollar at that time."

"Since then, the dollar has been allowed to float cleanly."

During the fall, former finance minister E. J. Benson discounted complaints from U.S. officials that the government was interfering with market forces to hold down the value of the Canadian dollar by buying U.S. dollars in large quantities. Such a process is termed a "dirty float."

Mr. Benson said then that only minor interventions were made to meet day-to-day exchange needs.

The international monetary shakedown began Aug. 15 when the United States announced measures to reverse its payments deficit.

Hospital Drug Study

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal grant of $6,500 has been awarded to the College of Pharmacy of the University of Saskatchewan to carry out a unit-dose drug-distribution survey in Canada.

The survey will study changes in hospital costs, medication errors and utilization of personnel which occur when hospitals change from a random stocking of drugs to a system where pharmacists dispense all drug doses in a form ready to be administered by nurses.

Applicants Sought

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government has received several applications for the position of ombudsman but likely will advertise the job, Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

He told a news conference the man wanted for the $20,000-a-year job should have some background in law and government procedure.

DICK CAVETT, who has hosted talk shows in the morning, in prime time and currently late-night (Monday through Friday, on Channel 4 at 11:30) is in trouble with the ABC network. The Dick Cavett Show has polled such low ratings that the network has placed him on a three-month probationary period with the possibility of cancellation if the ratings don't improve within that time.

Low Ratings Put Cavett on Probation

By DAN LEWIS

The recent announcement regarding the future of the Dick Cavett Show simply amounts to putting Dick on probation for the next three months. If he does better — a lot better apparently — ABC will pat him on the head like a nice little boy and tell him he can hang around for a while longer. If his rating don't improve, then ABC will still pat him on the back and tell him to pack up and leave.

Officially, the announcement says that Dick's contract ran out last Thursday and the network did not pick it up for renewal. Instead, the network will keep Dick around by extending the renewal deadline until July 28. Then it may exercise its options — either to renew or dump the show. If the network decides there's no future for Dick there, then he'll still be around for two more months, until Sept. 29, before saying fond farewells.

When one examines the action carefully, it appears that ABC is giving itself some breathing space to figure out what to replace Cavett with. They'll be analyzing, too, how Johnny Carson holds up with his move to Hollywood and see if Carson's move, leaving Cavett with New York all to himself as a network talk show, helps improve interest in Dick's show.

But the big point the communique from Martin Starger, ABC's programming director, explaining the Cavett situation, is that the network has appropriated funds to develop suggestions for a possible replacement.

Big Push

That means ABC has between now and Sept. 29 to come up with a new show or, as the announcement stated, a "new formula" for a late-night show. That new formula might have meant old movies, but CBS already came up with that "new" when it dropped Merv Griffin.

All the talk about the revised format for Cavett's show and a big promotional push to stimulate interest in Cavett, doesn't register. If all Dick needs is just some promotion on the network's part to expand interest in his show, then where was the network until now?

Starger maintained that ABC really wants to keep Cavett going, pointing to its "critical acclaim." Yet, despite that "critical acclaim," Starger confessed the show's "broad-based audience appeal did not increase" in the past year.

When I spoke to an ABC spokesman yesterday to see just what was planned to stimulate "broad-base audience appeal," there didn't seem to be anything specific at the moment. "I suspect Cavett might be more available now for interviews," the spokesman said.

For certain, ads in local daily newspapers will be increased and the affiliates, who have been very unhappy and pressuring the network to drop the show, will have available more on-the-air promotions toped by Cavett publicizing shows of the night.

There is much truth in Starger's reference to the critical acclaim for Cavett's show. But then again, that could be the very problem that program faces. Carson has prevailed as No. 1 in late-night sweeps all along only because he has concentrated exclusively on entertainment.

At 11:30 at night, until 1 a.m., most people want to unwind before they go to bed. They've just watched the grizzly newscasts, and they aren't particularly interested in any 90 minutes of conversation on sociological problems, the ecological threat, intense talk about fem lib, politics or the general state of the world.

Crushing Blow

The most crushing blow to the Cavett forces came when his audience fell even lower when Griffin left CBS and was replaced by movies. At ABC and in the Cavett office especially, there was much confidence that Dick's ratings would improve and that he would be the principal beneficiary against the movies. Instead, he lost ground. Since the beginning of the year his ratings have slipped 14 per cent.

There's another thing to consider, which points up the network's subterfuge in the real thrust of the announcement. Cavett has hosted talk shows at ABC now in the morning, in prime time and late night. His ratings were disappointing in all three, despite the aforementioned "critical acclaim."

He's bright, witty, intelligent and clever and those who have become his fans, though they may be small in numbers, are intense. It leads me to one conclusion:

Cavett certainly should remain on television, doing just what he's always done, perhaps with less frequency, in an area where numbers are not the most important thing in retaining a show, but where quality does count, and where the self-determined, more discriminating viewer can find the programming to suit his or her taste.

TV Questions and Answers

By PENNY PENCE

Q: Why is Alan Sues leaving Laugh-In? I can't imagine him in any other kind of show.—L.G.

A: Neither can I, but apparently Alan can. He explains that he's been on L-I long enough, and now wants the freedom of accepting other offers he's had to turn down because of his commitment to the series. That's the same story we heard from Judy Carne, who admits she later asked to be reinstated on L-I; also from Jo Anne Worley, who we see little of these days, and from Henry Gibson, who's doing commercials.

Q: Is Pat Brady, Roy Rogers' old sidekick, still acting?—T.Y.

A: No. Sad to report the 57 year-old Brady, who retired some years ago to Mountain Falls, Colo., died last month.

Q: Whatever happened to Ruth Buzzi's and Michele Lee's series, Singles?—T.F.

A: Nothing. The story is that the slapstick attitude of the half-hour pilot proved weaker than the network hoped and it was mixed. Ruth's back on Laugh-In and Michele hopes she'll land her own series next year.

Q: Saw CBS' Glass House again recently, a fine movie, and realized that Billy Dee Williams, who was so fine in Brian's Song, was also in House. Hasn't he a major feature about to be released soon?—K.I.

A: Billy co-stars with Diana Ross in "Lady Sings the Blues," which should be released next fall.

Q: When Room 222 is filmed, is there an actual Walt Whitman High School used?—G.E.

A: No. Walt Whitman High is the theatrical name; the backdrop of 222 is a local Los Angeles high school.

Q: What happens when one of the stars of a daytime soap opera gets sick? I read that those programs are filmed 52 weeks of the year without any vacation for the actors?—Y.U.

A: In most cases — actors being long-suffering types, anyway — the stars merely grin and bear whatever malady has befallen them. If they are simply too sick to work, the show is written around their temporary absence.

Mike Evans landed his role on All in the Family on the CBS Television Network as a result of a hitchhiked ride with a talent agent, who later arranged Evans' audition for the show.

MOVIES

Friday

They Came From Beyond Space (x), on 12 at 7:30. English-made sci-fi about alien minds in terrestrial bodies with Robert Hutton and Jennifer Jane.

Jigsaw (xx), on 8 at 8. A made-for-TV movie about a police lieutenant who follows a hunch that leads to a mystery complete with vanishing corpse. Cast includes James Wainwright, Vera Miles and Richard Kiley.

Story of a Woman (xxx), on 5 at 8:30. Swedish actress Bibi Andersson, best known for her work in Ingmar Bergman films, stars in this love story about a diplomat's wife who sees her marriage threatened by the return of her ex-lover. Filmed in Italy and Sweden with a good supporting cast including Robert Stack, James Farentino and Annie Girardot.

Our Daily Bread (xxxx), on 9 at 8:30. This 1934 film was denounced as leftist by some U.S. newspapers and called capitalistic propaganda by Russia. Writer-director King Vidor's drama centres on a young couple who start a farming commune to help fight unemployment during the Depression.

Murder Once Removed (xxx), on 7 at 9. Emmy winner Barbara Bain stars in this 1971 TV-movie. Mission Impossible's former femme fatale is still involved in intrigue, this time as a partner in a deadly romantic triangle. Filmed in and around Los Angeles, this film also stars John Forsythe and Richard Kiley.

The Leopard (xxx), on 12 at 9. Director Luchino Visconti filmed this 1962 adaptation of the Giuseppe di Lampedussa novel, which focuses on the social changes affecting an upper class family in Italy during the 1860s. Burt Lancaster looks great as the noble patriarch of the family with supporting cast including Claudia Cardinale and Alain Delon.

Circus of Fear (xx), on 7 at 11:30. Scotland Yard investigates when a deranged killer stalks the big top.

Jigsaw (xx), on 6 at midnight. (See earlier this evening for details.)

Village of the Giants (x), on 8 at midnight. A mysterious substance causes teenagers to become giants this 1965 sci-fi adventure.

Legend of the Lost (xxx), on 12 at 12:05. John Wayne stars as a man who comes to Timbuctoo with the express purpose of finding a guide to lead him on a mysterious journey into the Sahara Desert. Supporting cast includes Sophia Loren and Rossano Brazzi.

Sleep, My Love (xxx), on 4 at 1. With the help of a quack doctor, a husband sets out to drive his wife mad. Excellent cast with Claudette Colbert, Robert Cummings and Don Ameche make this 1948 thriller worth watching.

Before I Hang (xx), on 7 at 1:15. A Boris Karloff melodrama about a doctor who develops a compulsion to kill after injecting himself with an experimental serum.

Inside Straight (xx), on 12 at 2:05. An embittered man recalls his past life which has been dominated by his lust for wealth. Starring in this 1951 drama are David Brian, Arlene Dahl and Barry Sullivan.

Saturday

Captain Carey, U.S.A. (xxx), on 11 at 12:30. Alan Ladd stars as a man betrayed to the Germans by an unknown person, who returns after the war intent upon finding his betrayer.

My Friend Flicka (xx), on 4 at 4. Mary O'Hara's story about a boy who tries to tame a wild horse. Roddy McDowall and Preston Foster star in this 1943 movie.

Monster from a Prehistoric Planet (xx), on 7 at 2:30. Japanese-made sci-fi.

Dreamboat (xxx), on 5 at 4. Delightful comedy about college students who discover that one of their professors is a long-forgotten movie star. Excellent cast with Clifton Webb, Ginger Rogers and Anne Francis.

A Taste of Evil (xxx), on 4 at 8:30. A 1971 TV-movie about a young rape victim, just released from a mental institution, who's being terrorized by mysterious events recalling the attack. Excellent cast with Barbara Stanwyck, Barbara Parkins, Arthur O'Connell and Roddy McDowell.

Gigi (xxx), on 5 at 9. Lerner and Lowe's delightful musical for the screen is a complete delight. Louis Jourdan is the epitome of the French man-about-town who suddenly realizes that little Gigi (beautifully played by Leslie Caron) has grown into a lovely young lady. Maurice Chevalier is perfectly cast as Gigi's guardian and the musical numbers are brilliantly staged. A treat for the whole family.

Black Water Gold (xx), on 8 at 9. A 1970 made-for-TV adventure about a deadly sea race by scuba divers to find gold aboard a sunken Spanish galleon. Cast includes Aron Kincaid, Keip Dullea and Bradford Dillman.

Desire in the Dust (xx), on 11 at 9. A Southern aristocrat with political ambitions attempts to cover up a family scandal. Good cast with Raymond Burr, Martha Hyer and Joan Bennett.

The Yellow Rolls-Royce (xxx), on 12 at 9. Rex Harrison, Ingrid Bergman, Shirley MacLaine, Omar Sharif, George C. Scott and Jeanne Moreau make up the star-studded cast in this film about the adventures of a fancy Rolls-Royce and the various people who own it.

Caprice (xxx), on 7 at 11. Complex spoof of suspense films, with Doris Day as a mod cosmetics consultant involved in industrial espionage and menaced by a narcotics ring. Richard Harris plays her leading man.

Black Water Gold (xx), on 6 at 11:30. (See earlier this evening for details).

Duffy (xx), on 8 at 11:20. Location photography of Almeria, Spain, highlights this comedy crime tale about over-age hipsters on the Mediterranean who plan the perfect robbery. Cast includes James Coburn, James Fox, James Mason and Susannah York.

12 Angry Men (xxxx), on 2 at 11:35. An engrossing drama about a jury of men who must decide whether a young boy killed his father. The entire drama is played in the jury room and is suspenseful and brilliantly acted by Henry Fonda, Lee J. Cobb, Ed Begley and E. G. Marshall.

The Opposite Sex (xx), on 12 at 11:35. The wife of a Broadway producer learns that she must adopt some feminine wiles to get her husband back from a beautiful showgirl. Starring in this 1956 comedy are June Allyson, Joan Collins, Leslie Nielsen and Dolores Gray.

Good News (xxx), on 6 at 11:05. A lively musical score aids a good cast (June Allyson, Peter Lawford and Mel Torme) in this musical comedy about a football hero who falls for a femme fatale who recently arrived on campus.

Goodbye Charlie (xx), on 8 at 11:35. Tony Curtis and Debbie Reynolds star in this 1964 comedy about a male murder victim who turns up reincarnated as a woman. Supporting cast includes Pat Boone and Walter Matthau.

Golf For Swingers

Lee Trevino's Golf For Swingers is now telecast at 3:30 p.m. Saturday, on KING TV 5. Trevino, top golf money-winner for this year and PGA Champion of the Year, will spend each show hosting and coaching two celebrity guests.

Set for upcoming shows are Joey Bishop, Jimmy Dean, Robert Stack, Joe Kapp, Pat Boone, Phil Harris, Peter Lawford, Peter Marshall and Jim Brolin.

Each segment pits the celebrity guests against one another and allows Trevino to play two shots for each (but never two in succession). After a three-hole match, the winner receives $1,000 donated to his favorite charity. Guests also receive sets of custom-made clubs from Lee.

In Golf For Swingers, comedy, golf and golf instruction make up a weekly half-hour full of entertainment for golfers and non-golfers.

MOVIES

Sunday

Beau Geste (xx), on 7 at 2:30. Guy Stockwell and Doug McClure star in this 1966 adventure of two brothers in the Foreign Legion.

Where the Bullets Fly (xx), on 12 at 2:35. An Englishmade inept spy spoof starring Tom Adams and Dawn Adams.

Fear Strikes Out (xxx), on 11 at 3:30. The story of the pressures that led up to baseball's Jim Piersall's (excellently portrayed by Anthony Perkins) mental breakdown. Karl Malden is well cast in the role of Piersall's domineering father.

Days of Wine and Roses (xxxx), on 11 at 6. Jack Lemmon and Lee Remick received Oscar nominations for their performances in this story of a young couple's battle against alcoholism. Excellent supporting cast with Charles Bickford and Jack Klugman.

A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum (xxxx), on 12 and 8. The 1966 film version of the mad, bawdy Broadway musical set in Ancient Rome is transferred to the screen by director Richard Lester with zest and style. Excellent cast with Zerd Mostel, Phil Silvers, Jack Gilford and Buster Keaton.

Spartacus (xxxx), on 4 at 9. A perfect blend of spectacle and story has Kirk Douglas as the Thracian gladiator who leads a bloody slave insurrection against Rome from 73-71 B.C. Directed by Stanley Kubrick it boasts a superb supporting cast including Laurence Olivier and Peter Ustinov.

Here Comes Cookie (xxx), on 2 at 11:45. George Burns and Gracie Allen star in this 1935 comedy.

Love Me Or Leave Me (xxx), on 12 at midnight, and 7 at 12:30. Dorris Day and James Cagney give fine performances in this 1955 tuneful biography of '20s singer Ruth Etting.

Earthquake Documentary. On 7 at 7. San Francisco: The City That Waits to Die, A BBC documentary examining the theory that within 20 years San Francisco could be stricken by a major earthquake. Seismologists, geophysicists and a structural engineer discuss the hazards involved and the possibility of predicting quakes. (60 mins.)

SAN FRANCISCO has a history of earthquakes. The last one (above 1906) levelled a lot of the city and scientists say that another will take place ... it's just a matter of time. On Sunday, May 14, at 7 p.m., on Channel 7, a program The City That Waits to Die, presents the facts about this phenomenon.

Carson Hosts Annual Emmy Awards

JOHNNY CARSON is master of ceremonies for the 1972 Emmy Awards to be telecast on Sunday, May 14, at 7 p.m., on Channels 7 and 12. A galaxy of star presenters including Samantha Eggar, Paul Lynde and George Peppard will assist the host.

Johnny Carson, as master of ceremonies for the Emmy Awards (1971-72), will headline a glittering cast of TV's luminaries from both sides of the camera when, on Sunday, May 14, at 10 p.m., CBC-TV presents the Emmy Awards special.

The annual event takes place at the Palladium, Hollywood, and the TV color special is built around the presentations of the awards by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

The BBC's two six-part historical drama series, The Six Wives of Henry VIII and Elizabeth R, both to begin repeat showings on CBC-TV this spring (Henry VIII re-runs started on May 6; Elizabeth R follows on Saturday, June 17, are among the major contenders in drama categories.

Their respective stars, Keith Michell (for Henry VIII) and Glenda Jackson (for Elizabeth R) also have nominations in the "outstanding performance" categories.

All In The Family, and its stars Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton, are also among the leading contenders for 1971-72 Emmies.

Following is a list of nominees in some of the leading categories:

Respect for Emmys

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Oscars are glamorous. the Tonys are prestigious. The Emmys are Funny.

Robert Lewine, president of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, would like to change the guffaws and ridicule to respect for Emmy.

A grand total of 224 nominees are involved as compared to half that number of Oscar competitiors and a handful of Tony hopefuls.

"Television is so diverse that we don't have a simple category structure like the Oscars," said Lewine, a veteran executive of all three networks. "A feature film is a feature film. A short subject is a short subject.

"But in television there is the half-hour situation comedy, the 90-minute drama, the hour-long detective series, anthologies, sports, news, documentaries, children's shows and daytime programs.

"Believe me, we work all year long trying to make the awards fair for everyone. We deal with more than 10,000 names who are entered in the competition over a year's period.

"Take our problem with The Wonderful World of Disney. One week it's a cartoon, the next a movie, then a variety show . . . it's all of them."

Lewine said any show which consists of six or more episodes qualifies as a series, explaining Mannix vs Elizabeth R.

Inasmuch as more persons watch television in a single night than go to the movies for the better part of a year, why do the Emmy's always trail the Oscars in the Nielsen ratings?

Lewine had an explanation: "Movie stars are more private persons, more glamorous and elusive. TV stars are in the home each week and psychologically audiences are more accustomed to them.

"Seeing Raymond Burr on television is not a new experience to viewers. On the other hand, a live appearance by Gregory Peck or Kirk Douglas is something of an event.

"It's the same philosophy that has proved almost every television star has failed in movies. The public won't pay to see actors when they can see them for nothing on television.

"This year I think we have a fine blend of entertainment and awards," Lewine concluded. "It's a formula that worked last year."

MOVIES

Monday

The Abominable Snowman of the Himalayas (xxx), on 4 at 9:30. A good adventure drama about a botanist who joins a Himalayan expedition to find Yeti—legendary half-human beings. Cast includes Forrest Tucker and Peter Cushing.

The Spanish Gardener (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A well-acted interesting drama about a diplomat's son who makes friends with a gardener who changes his outlook and way of living. Dirk Bogarde and Jon Whitely.

Sergeant Ryker (xx), on 7 at 4. Courtroom drama about a U.S. sergeant on trial for defecting. Good cast with Lee Marvin, Vera Miles and Bradford Dillman.

These Wilder Years (xxx), on 12 at 8:30. A wealthy industrialist returns to his home town determined to find his illegitimate son whom he abandoned 20 years earlier. Excellent cast with James Cagney, Barbara Stanwyck and Walter Pidgeon.

Fantastic Voyage (xxx), on 4 at 9. This 1966 science fiction film won Oscars for art direction and special affects. Reduced to the size of bacteria, five specialists are injected into a dying scientist to try and save his life. Cast includes Stephen Boyd, Donald Pleasence and Raquel Welch.

7 Faces of Dr. Lao (xxx), on 5 at 9. A genius make-up man is behind Tony Randall who stars in this 1964 movie about an elderly Chinese gentleman who works potent magic in the mythical town of Abalone.

The Night of the Iguana (xxxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. From the story by Tennessee Williams that explores the interplay of people in emotional torment at a crumbling jungle hotel in Mexico. Filmed on location, directed by John Houston and starring Richard Burton, Ava Gardner and Deborah Kerr.

Attack and Retreat (xxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. A lavishly produced war drama about an Italian soldier behind the Russian front who is separated from his company during an attack. Starring in this 1966 movie are Arthur Kennedy and Peter Falk.

Ernie Flatt, choreographer for The Carol Burnett Show on the CBS Television Network, produced wartime shows for a Pacific Special Service Unit headed by Major Maurice Evans.

Jacques Cousteau. On 4 and 8. Meet the legendary mermaid—the manatee. It's difficult to see how the manatee could have so deceived ancient sailors. Also known as the sea cow, this mammal is far from an entrancing sylph. Weighing in at a half-ton, it eats, sleeps and reproduces—and that's about it. Harmless to man, the manatee is nonetheless an endangered species, and Jacques Cousteau is in Florida to study the creature and its problems. Rod Serling is host. (60 mins.)

Bernstein in London. On 9 at 8. Leonard Bernstein conducts the Vienna Philharmonic at London's Royal Albert Hall. Taped in 1971 the program offers selections from Haydn Ravel and Schumann. In an 18-minute segment filmed in New York, violinist John Corigliano, and composers Aaron Copland and Virgil Thompson discuss their friendships with Bernstein. (2 hours.)

George Kirby. On 8 at 8:30. Comedian George Kirby heads this program of comedy and music. Scheduled guests include Lainie Kazan, the singing Poppy Family, rock group Lighthouse and the dancing Little Steps. (60 mins.)

LEONARD BERNSTEIN conducts the Vienna Philharmonic at London's Royal Albert Hall from the program taped in 1971 to be shown on Monday, May 15, on Channel 9 at 8 p.m.

MILBURN STONE, 67, the Doc Adams of television's Gunsmoke, resumes practice with his favorite rod and reel as he recovers from heart surgery at his home near Hollywood. He expects to be back for the 18th season of Gunsmoke in late September.

Doc Resumes Practice

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Humor and irascibility lurk in the eyes of Milburn Stone as he begins his 18th year playing gruff old Doc Adams in Gunsmoke.

"Tired of playing the same role for 18 years?" he asked. "Hell, no. I love every minute of it."

An actor since 1922, and well enough established as a character man in the theatre, motion pictures and early television, Stone was a dependable journeyman. But Doc Adams has made him a star.

"Every tick of the clock brings me closer to what I'd really have been if I'd been born Dr. Galen Adams. I'm getting closer to his age all the time."

Stone very nearly missed aging at all last year. He underwent open-heart surgery and for a while every tick of his heart could have been the last. But he is robust now. His color is good. He weighs 150 pounds, just as he did when he was a kid in high school.

Anyone facing heart surgery can gain courage talking to Milburn, a name he detests.

"There's a story of how Doc Adams got his first name," the actor said. "On the show his shingle reads Dr. G. Adams, the producers and writers have never given him a first name.

"Then along came an episode where an old friend visits Dodge City. Naturally he had to call Doc by his first name. So they called me and asked me to think up a fitting given name for Doc.

"Well I didn't think George fitted the character, or any other of the common names beginning with the letter G.

"Finally I thought of a name that I hated more than Milburn. That's Galen. And because Doc would hate it too, he only used his initial on the shingle outside his office."

Milburn is so much into the character of Adams that his affection for the character is as genuine as it might be for a close friend.

Every year he is asked by someone to account for the astonishingly long success story of Gunsmoke on the tube. Each year he scratches his head and pulls on an ear lobe in the manner of Doc and splays his fingers, palms up, in a gesture of dismay.

"Who can say?" he asked.

"There are many reasons. But I've concluded the biggest single explanation is that the cast and crew get along so well together. I think the audience feels that. We often hear people say we look like we're having a good time on the show. And we are.

"I've seen many series break up because of petty differences and jealousies.

MOVIES

Tuesday

A Blueprint For Murder (xx), on 4 at 9:30. A "perfect crime" melodrama starring Joseph Cotten and Jean Peters.

The Purple Plain (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Gregory Peck stars as a flyer who crashes into the Burmese jungle and fights his way back to civilization.

Wild and Wonderful (xx), on 7 at 4. A runaway pet poodle leads his owner to an attractive musician—and love. Tony Curtis and Christine Kaufmann star in the 1964 comedy.

The Deadly Dream (xx), on 4 at 8:30. Lloyd Bridges stars as a scientist whose living nightmare centres on a mysterious tribunal out to execute him for an unexplained crime.

Dear Brigitte (xx), on 5 at 9. This 1965 comedy tells the story of an eccentric poet-professor and his efforts to camouflage his son's scientific genius. James Stewart and Glynis Johns.

The Rounders (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Glenn Ford and Henry Fonda are an ingratiating pair of modern-day horse wranglers who share some comical adventures in this engaging 1965 tale. A good supporting cast including Chill Wills and Edgar Buchanan keep the comedy rolling briskly along.

The Hangman (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. A strong drama of the old Southwest starring Robert Taylor as a marshal torn between duty and humanity. Supporting cast includes Fess Parker, Jack Lord and Tina Louise.

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan is about to launch an experimental system of television that will offer shopping from home, round-the-clock news and even burglary and sickness protection.

Owners of special sets will be able to order up programs and might be able to call up courses of study for their children or arrange medical consultations without leaving their homes.

The ministry of international trade and industry is undertaking a four-year, $10-million program to develop an "image information system" which will combine computers with a sophisticated community antenna television system.

Written by host Charles Collingwood. (60 mins.)

CBC News Teams Cover Vietnam

The CBC News Service has two teams of correspondents covering the North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam in what has been described as the most important phase of the prolonged war.

Joe Schlesinger, CBC News Hong Kong correspondent and his cameraman Brian Hosking, have been joined by CBC Vancouver newsman Mike McCourt, who is now in the Mekong Delta. McCourt's cameraman is Harry Nuttall.

As far as is known, Schlesinger and McCourt now are the only Canadian radio and television journalists covering the war. In certain instances, their television film has been the only footage available, used not only by the CBC, but also by the American networks.

When North Vietnamese forces with tanks were attacking An Loc recently, Joe Schlesinger was there to send film and radio reports back to Canada via satellite. How Joe and his cameraman Brian Hosking got to An Loc and out again is a story in itself.

Now that the Americans are pulling out of Vietnam, newsmen have to find their own way around the battle zone, hitching rides with South Vietnamese helicopters and vehicles. Gone are the days when a newsman could call up the Americans for a free ride into battle zones, complete with meals and a place to sleep.

JOE SCHLESINGER

"There is no big press operation in Vietnam any more", says Schlesinger," and you have to find your own way in and out of the fights."

To add to the difficulties, there is the increased danger of being killed. Schlesinger and Hosking hitched a ride with a medical evacuation helicopter going to An Loc. They were the only TV journalists at An Loc. Their helicopter was carrying seven other passengers besides themselves.

When the big North Vietnamese attack came, Schlesinger and Hosking were aboard the last helicopter to get out before invading tanks arrived. Of the seven passengers who went into An Loc with them, six had been killed and one wounded. Schlesinger and Hosking came out uncathed.

Their film was the only footage available on the An Loc fight and was transmitted to North America by satellite to be used not only by CBC television news, but also on American TV.

When it is all over, Joe Schlesinger hopes to get a brief holiday. In the past two months, he's had only one day off to spend with his wife and family in Hong Kong.

Swinging Maestro On CBC Telescope

BORIS BROTT the young conductor of the Hamilton Philharmonic is profiled on CBC-TV's Telescope, Tuesday, May 16, at 9:30, on Channels 2 and 6. Telescope follows him as he commutes in his own plane, tapes a radio show and leads his orchestra in a concert.

At the age of five Boris Brott made his debut as an instrumental soloist with the Montreal Symphony. He made an impression then and he hasn't stopped since.

Today, some 23 years on, he is one of Canada's leading musical figures with a list of credentials that includes understudy to the late Pierre Monteaux when he was conductor of the London Symphony Orchestra; assistant to Walter Susskind when he was conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra; full conductor of Britian's Northern Sinfonia Orchestra; then assistant to Leonard Bernstein when he was conductor of the New York Philharmonic; then full conductor of no less than three Canadian orchestras — the Hamilton Philharmonic the Lakehead Symphony and the Regina Symphony orchestras.

On top of all this he guest conducts for many orchestras in Canada and Europe, last year had his own series on CBC radio (called Brott To You) and currently has his own television program in Hamilton. To say that he is dedicated to music is to understate the case somewhat, yet his public image is anything but that of the deadly earnest intellectual. He's hip, mod, a swinger who likes all the appurtenances of success.

CBC-TV's Telescope presents a fascinating profile of this young musician Tuesday May 16 at 9:30 p.m. as the cameras follow him on one of his typical, busy days. It was filmed last year when Brott used to commute from Hamilton to Toronto in his own plane to tape his radio show.

The program shows him from the time he gets up in the morning, leaves home for a rehearsal of a high school orchestra, flies to Toronto to tape Brott To You, returns to Hamilton for the concert with the high school orchestra, and follows him around as he drives in his telephone-equipped convertible to meet a number of appointments.

In between all this activity he discusses his own career and music in general and at his office at the headquarters of the Hamilton Philharmonic plays back for Telescope on his own portable VTR machine a tape of himself conducting the Hamilton Philharmonic in a spirited performance of the William Tell overture.

Lucy Approves Romance Between Lisa and Desi

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It's not necessarily true that everybody loves a lover. In fact, cow-eyed, lovelorn couples can be crashing bores.

But not Liza Minnelli and Desi Arnaz Jr.

When they appeared at the recent Academy Awards presentations the mobs in the stands went berserk. The biggest stars in Hollywood craned to see what all the excitement was about.

"Us," said Liza, astonished at the reaction.

"Neither of us really understand it, except that people probably like to see young people in love having a good time. Desi and I are in love and we sure have a good time wherever we go."

It's true. The daughter of Judy Garland and the son of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz have a crackling, electric effect on one another and the sparks light up a grin of approval among onlookers.

Lucille Ball approves of the lovebirds and frequently allows Liza and Desi to concoct all manner of wild dishes in the kitchen for family dinners.

Liza's transformation from a highstrung girl is something more than an emotional leveling out. Her features have softened, her voice is lower and somehow more lyrical. She's immeasurably more pretty than she was only two or three year ago.

"Desi and I have known one another since we were children.

"We aren't making any long-range plans. There's no reason to. We aren't in a hurry to make important decisions that might affect the rest of our lives.

Wednesday

Ambush (xx), on 4 at 9:30. A U.S. cavalry troop attempts to free a white woman who is the captive of Apache Indians. Starring in this 1949 western adventure are Robert Taylor, Arlene Dahl and Don Taylor.

See How They Run (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. English-made 1964 drama about criminals who go after three children who unwittingly have the evidence that could expose an international crime syndicate. Cast includes John Forsythe, Senta Berger and Jane Wyatt.

Cape Fear (xxx), on 7 at 4. A tense drama about a lawyer and his family who are threatened by a sadistic ex-convict. Excellent cast with Gregory Peck, Polly Bergen and Robert Mitchum.

The Green Glove (xx), on 12 at 7:30. European scenery highlights this chase drama about a search for wartime art treasures starring Glenn Ford and Geraldine Brooks.

Shenandoah (xxx), on 7 at 9. James Stewart stars in this 1965 sentimental tale about a Virginia farmer's efforts to keep his family out of the Civil War.

The Valley of Gwangi (x), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Prehistoric monsters steal the scenes in this 1969 sci-fi western starring James Franciscus and Gita Golan.

Mambo (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. An obscure and offbeat Italian-made drama about a shopgirl's rise to ballet stardom. Good cast with Silvana Mangano, Michael Rennie and Vittorio Gassman.

Jacques Cousteau, on 8 at 8. The Unexpected Voyage of Pepito and Cristobal follows two young fur seals from Africa's Cape of Good Hope to the Caribbean. Captain Cousteau wanted to know if seals might become friendly and domesticated animals. The seals live in tanks aboard the ship; are fed sumptously and suffer the jealousy of Zoom, the ship's mascot dog. Narrated by Cousteau and Rod Serling. (60 mins.)

DR. GEORGE BENJAMIN research chemist and the world's foremost authority on the underwater caves of the Bahamas. CBC-TV's The Nature of Things on Monday, May 15, at 10 p.m., on Channels 2 and 6.

IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS in religious history come to life again on Man Alive's four-part series beginning Monday, May 15, at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6. Featured actors will include (clockwise, to) Peter Donat as Thomas Becket, John Colicos as Martin Luther, Powys Thomas as Charles I and Marilyn Lightstone as Mary, Queen of Scots.

"Hot-Line" Profiles on Man Alive

Thomas Becket, Henry II, Martin Luther, Charles I and Oliver Cromwell, Mary Stuart, John Knox . . . These and others dramatically "return to life" as CBC televisions Man Alive presents repeat telecasts of its highly-acclaimed "hot-line" series of dramatic historical reconstructions, starting Monday, May 15, at 10:30 p.m.

Produced by John McGreevy, the four-part color series recreates the sequences of events up to and after important religious incidents in history—the assassination of Thomas Becket in 1170, the revolt by Martin Luther against church "establishment" in Europe, the execution of Charles I of England by Oliver Cromwell, and the battle royal of passion and wits between Mary, Queen of Scots and John Knox. Also viewed are the motives of the leading participants in these events, and the ultimate consequences of history.

Becket (May 15), focusses on the political assassination of Thomas Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, brutally murdered in his cathedral on December 29, 1170. Starred are Peter Donat as Becket, William Hutt as Henry II and Chris Wiggins as the knight assassin. Roy Bonisteel is the interviewer.

The incidents that ultimately led to revolt against the established Church in Europe, five centuries ago, are examined in Luther: The Man Who Took The Lid Off (May 22). With John Colicos as Luther, Eric House as Tetzel, the influential priest, and Gillie Fenwick as Staupitz, Luther's superior.

Murder For God's Sake, a dramatic reconstruction of the arrest, trial and execution of Charles I of England in 1649, will be telecast on May 29. Probing deeply into conflicting forces — and irreconcilable views — behind the years, the half-hour display tragic events of the Cromwell features John Colicos (seen the previous week as Luther) as Cromwell, Powys Thomas as Charles, and Denise Pelletier as Henrietta Maria.

Fourth and final program of the series will be Politics Of Passion, on June 5, a look at the battle royale of wits and passion between Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, and the Scottish churchman John Knox. In the two-member cast are Marilyn Lightstone as Mary and Anthony Palmer as Knox.

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — British actor Anton Rodgers, French-Canadian singer Monique Leyrac and Lila Kedrova, who won an Academy Award for her performance in the motion picture Zorba the Greek, will star in the Stratford Festival production of The Threepenny Opera. The musical opens June 20.

B.C. Radio Affected by Time Change

The southeastern part of British Columbia which lies in the Mountain Time Zone has followed the lead of Alberta in adopting daylight saving time for the first time. Listeners to the CBC's network of low power relay transmitters in the Kootenays will be affected insofar as their program schedule will be one hour out in relationship to their clocks. The transmitters receive their programming from CBU in Vancouver which operates on Pacific Daylight Time. In the past this problem has existed during the winter months when British Columbians within the Pacific Time zone revert to Pacific Time from Pacific Daylight Time.

The CBC, in considering the alternatives, has decided to continue broadcasting the Pacific Region programming in the area for the present. "The alternative," says Frank Stalley, CBC's Director of Radio for the British Columbia Region "would be to switch the program feed from the Pacific network to the Prairie network emanating out of Calgary, thus eliminating the time discrepancy. However, we feel that Kootenay listeners would probably prefer to receive their programming from Vancouver in order that they could continue to hear B.C.-oriented newscasts, weather reports, public affairs programming, consumer and stock market reports, school broadcasts, sports reports and many other broadcasts specially prepared to reflect B.C. provincal interests and activities."

"There is no perfect solution to this problem and we would welcome the reaction of listeners in the affected area to our decision," Stalley said.

Thursday

So This Is New York (xx), on 4 at 9:30. Henry Morgan, Virginia Grey and Rudy Valley star in this 1948 comedy about a small town boy's adventures in the big city.

Ill Met By Moonlight (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. On German-occupied Crete, British officers plot a kidnapping. Dirk Bogarde and Marius Goring star in this English-made war drama.

Games (xx), on 7 at 4. An off-beat macabre drama about a warped rich young couple who indulge in way out rituals of a kind not condoned by civilized society. Good cast with Simone Signoret, James Caan and Katherine Ross.

Duffy (xx), on 7 and 12 at 9. Location photography of Almeria, Spain highlights this crime tale about overage hipsters on the Mediterranean planning a robbery. Starring in this 1968 comedy are James Coburn, James Fox, James Mason and Susannah York.

The Learning Tree (xxxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A recollection of the black experience in 1920s Kansas. Photojournalist Gordon Parks' wistful story centres on a 15-year-old boy coming of age in a world of racial accommodation and hatreds. Parks' 1969 adaptation of his autobiographical novel was almost a one-man project: he produced, directed, wrote the script and composed the score.

Teacher's Pet (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Doris Day and Clark Gable star in this 1958 comedy about a newspaper editor who falls for a journalism instructor.

Playhouse New York, on 9 at 8:30. A Forties picture show is this program featuring scenes from classic movies such as The Maltese Falcon, The Treasure of Sierra Madre and not-to-be-forgotten Humphrey Bogart in Casablanca. There are interviews with Ingrid Bergman and Robert Mitchum but the program is more than nostalgia. The period's political pressures are recalled by directors John Huston and Frank Capra; and writers Dalton Trumbo and Albert Maltz, both of whom were black-listed at the time. (90 mins.)

HUMPHREY BOGART is highlighted in Playhouse New York, a special program of film classics of the Forties with scenes from The Maltese Falcon, The Treasure of Sierra Madre and Casablanca. The program also includes interviews with Robert Mitchum and Ingrid Bergman and can be seen on Thursday, May 18 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

An Evening With Kate Reid On CBC's Program X

Kate Reid as Bernard Shaw's Saint Joan — Kate Reid as Mary, the mother in Eugene O'Neill's A Long Day's Journey Into Night — Kate Reid as Lady Bracknell in Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest:

Kate Reid in any one of these roles would be a guaranteed sell-out at any theatre box office.

Canada's most famous actress has never played any of these classical women of the theatre but last year for CBC-TV's Program X series she gave viewers some tantalising glimpses of all three in a half-hour of dramatic readings. Entitled An Evening With Kate Reid, the program will be repeated on Program X Thursday, May 18 at 9:30 p.m.

An Evening with Kate Reid is an event by any standards. In excerpts from the three stage plays, she is supported by stage actor Roland Hewgill, with whom she has worked at the Stratford Festival and elsewhere.

In a nine-minute solo monologue from the writings of Dorothy Parker (A Telephone Call) she portrays a woman agonizing over a long-awaited call from a man who "said he would telephone at five o'clock."

In the excerpts of the widely varying stage roles, Miss Reid appears as: the young Joan of Arc, explaining her inspired mission to Robert, a village squire (an early scene from Saint Joan); a demented drug addict, dreamily reminiscing about happier days (Mary, in a scene from A Long Day's Journey Into Night); an English grand dame (in the famous handbag scene between Lady Bracknell and John Worthing, in The Importance of Being Earnest).

An Evening With Kate Reid was directed by Herbert Roland, and taped in a CBC Toronto studio in one seven-hour day. The taping was preceded by six days of concentrated rehearsal.

"I'd never done this kind of thing before; it's the hardest work you can do," says Kate. "It's all 'you,' and if you don't give it total concentration you're up the creek. But it's lovely work. We were supposed to rehearse six hours a day, but with that sort of concentrated thing it's impossible. I was unable to sustain it for more than four hours at a time."

The program itself was chosen jointly by the actress and the producer: "I haven't done any of the people I play before, and would like to play all three women very much. We had a much more extensive line-up of material in mind, but no time to do them."

Miss Reid says she enjoyed working with director Roland, and the feeling was mutual. He says, "Kate worked very hard; she was marvellous. It was a very exciting program to do. We kept it simple. A set by Nikolai Soloviov somehow adapted itself to each of the elements in the program, and only the furniture was changed. Kate and Roland Hewgill were both in evening dress. Our aim was to capture the mood of each scene."

KATE REID performs excerpts from plays by Shaw, Wilde and O'Neill and a monologue from the writings of Dorothy Parker on CBC-TV's Program X on Thursday, May 18 at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

McLEISH'S WILD HORSES filmed in the picturesque foothills region of the Canadian Rockies. This TV drama tells the story of a young farmer involved in a get-rich-quick scheme to capture and sell wild horses and can be seen on CBC's Sunday At Nine, May 14 at 9 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6.

Canadian Program Wins U.S. Award

REGINA (CP) — The Circus, the second program in a Children's educational television series called Sue's Place, has won a 1972 Ohio State Award in the category of performing arts and humanities.

It is the only Canadian telecast to be so honored this year.

The award's citation read:

"Sue's Place is a wonderfully captivating attic refuge where children can explore all their senses and skills. The program succeeds in the task of integrating disciplines: art, music, drama, languages, sciences and math, using procedures that are unique and educationally sound."

The program was written by Ken Kramer with Sue Kramer, acting as host for the Saskatchewan education department. It is produced by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and is telecast in the four western provinces. Ken Kramer and Sue Kramer are both of the Globe Theatre.

Ohio State Awards are to the world of television what the Academy Awards are to the world of film, symbols of international recognition for outstanding work in broadcasting, said an education department spokesman.

It was the second venture into education television by the Globe's artistic directors — and their second Ohio award, said Mr. Kramer. In 1968, the Globe's high school program, Shakespeare and the Globe, also was a winner.

LEE GRANT Emmy-winning actress (The Neon Ceiling 1971) as she appears in the Broadway play The Prisoner of Second Avenue and on television.

LEE GRANT as she will appear as Sophie Portnoy, the mother in the film Portnoy's Complaint.

Lee Adds Phoney Fat For Plum Movie Role

By DAN LEWIS

Backstage at the Eugene O'Neill theatre the laughs came through the little loud speaker just outside Lee Grant's dressing room. It was Wednesday afternoon, and the matinee crowd sounded like it was enjoying The Prisoner of Second Avenue at least as much as every packed evening audience since the show opened.

The dialogue between Lee and Peter Falk seemed distant through the speaker, but the laughs got stronger, and then there was the closing lines and the applause reached crescendo. A few minutes later, Lee Grant trudged into her dressing room, changed into a robe, and stretched across a sofa. A young lady had heated up some soup, and Lee unwrapped the foil from a sandwich. It was snack time between shows.

It is a grind, eight shows a week, including two on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Yet, as gruelling as it may be, Lee can recall only once having missed a performance in her Broadway career. That was recently, when a severe sore throat prevented her from doing an evening performance (she had done the matinee).

But even at that, Lee couldn't stay away from the theatre. "I watched the show through the side curtains," Lee revealed. "Since I wasn't working, it wouldn't have been right for me to sit in the audience to watch it, so when the lights went down, I thinly parted the curtains at the side of the theatre and watched.

"But you know what? It's a good show. Funny. And it proves anyone can do it."

That's prepping for a soon-due change in the cast of the big hit by Neil Simon. Both Lee and Falk will relinquish their roles this summer, Peter to return to playing Lieutenant Columbo for another season on NBC and Lee to make her directional debut in movies.

Directing for Lee will add even greater stature to the immense talents of this gifted actress, whose performances earned her two nominations for Emmy Awards, and a third nomination for an Oscar in a single, matchless year — 1971.

She won the Emmy, even though she was in the unique position of competing with herself last year. She had been nominated for both The Neon Ceiling, for which she won the award, and also for Ransom For a Dead Man, opposite Peter Falk in what turned out to be the successful pilot film for the Columbo series.

She also was nominated last year for an Oscar in best supporting actress category for The Landlord, but lost out to Helen Hayes (in Airport).

Lee's career has been mercurial the past year. The Emmy and Oscar-baiting performances, followed by the big hit on Broadway, have given enormous new stature to her career.

There's more to come. Before coming to New York for The Prisoner of Second Avenue, Lee completed one of the more talked-about movie roles in years. She plays the Jewish mother in Portnoy's Complaint scheduled for release this summer.

Portnoy turned out to be as much a test of physical endurance as anything for Lee. Since the mother, Sophie, ages to 60 in the film adaptation of Phillip Roth's best-selling controversial book, Lee had to undergo an exhausting hour and a half in make-up every morning.

One of the interesting things is the make-up department literally built a new step-in body for her. It was fashioned out of skin-tight leotards with padding in the places where 60-year-old women might be inclined to bulge.

"They also made a special mouthpiece for me so that when inserted in my mouth it puffed my cheeks," Lee said. "They gave me bags under the eyes, heavy jowls and a double chin."

The transformation is remarkable. Lee pointed to a picture on a nearby table. I didn't recognize the woman in it and Lee laughed. It was Lee on the set all made up for Sophie.

"It was very uncomfortable for six weeks — both physically and mentally," Lee said. "I wanted the role. So I had no choice. If I wanted to do it, there was only one way it could be done. Sophie had to look like one of those hopeless women who stuff food in their mouths all day, and spend all day cleaning and badgering the kids and the husband."
